Mystery Blast

This twisted wreckage is what was left of a 1948 sedan after a mystery bomb explosion underneath it in Cleveland. Parts of the car were hurled as high as the ninth floor of the hotel across from where the car was parked, and windows in the hotel were broken. The car was owned by a Newark, N.J., laundry supply representative, and the blast is believed the result of rivalry between laundry supply firms.—(NEA Photo)

More Dockers Quit With 78 Ships Tied Up, 8 Undermanned

LONDON (Reuter)—Most branches of the National Union of Railwaymen today agreed to call off their go-slow campaign.

The railway workers had threatened to start their slowdown from midnight tomorrow. It would have thrown Britain's vast railway network into chaos.

Only a few branches of the N.R.U. are believed to have rejected their union's suspension of its earlier call for the slowdown campaign in support of its demands for increased wages and improved working conditions.

The walkout of an additional 200 stevedores on the London docks brought the total out in sympathy with the Canadian Seamen's Union strike to 8,119. The dock board said 78 vessels were tied up and another eight undermanned.

While the seamen's dispute spread on the London waterfront, railwaymen in the N.R.U.'s 1,500 local branches debated a circular sent out by the union explaining the new instructions.

TO AVOID TENSION

The circular, it was understood, calls on members to allow their claim for a 10s. ($2) weekly wage raise to be dealt with in a reasonable atmosphere and not one of tension and duress in view of promised early intervention by the government.

Meanwhile, London's dock strike was still unsettled with 78 ships waiting to be unloaded.

The railway workers' go-slow campaign had been due to operate from midnight Sunday in an attempt to hasten settlement of he men's claims.

N.D.U. headquarers sent telegrams to all branches Friday, telling them the instructions had been suspended and that they should continue normal working.

STATEMENT BY MINISTER

This followed a statement in Parliament by Labor Minister George Isaacs, who offered his department's services to secure an early settlement of the dispute.

Isaacs is expected to set up a fact-finding court of inquiry.

Asbestos Strikers To Work

ASBESTOS, Que. (CP)—Peace and quiet today reign over this Eastern Townships industrial town which Friday rocked with wild celebrations marking the end of the long, violence-ridden strike of asbestos workers.

Monday 2,000 workers will return to the jobs they left Feb. 13 in protest over the refusal of the companies to grant a 15-cent pay increase and improvement in working conditions.

The 2,000, all employees of the Canadian Johns-Manville Company, are the last of the asbestos strikers to return to work. Last month 2,500 employees of four smaller companies in the Thetford Mines area reached an agreement with their employers and went back to work.

The settlement came through negotiations personally conducted by Most Rev. Maurice Roy, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Quebec.

Announcement of the settlement came from Gerard Picard, president of the Canadian Catholic Confederation of Labor, with which the various asbestos workers' syndicates are affiliated.

95 CENTS AN HOUR

The agreement provides for:

An increase of 10 cents an hour to bring the basic hourly wage to 95 cents; seniority rights; reemployment of all strikers without discrimination, except those now before the courts who are found guilty; four paid holidays yearly.

The remaining five cents of the workers' demands will be under negotiation.

Diplomats Warned Of Rioting In Slovakia

By RICHARD LASKISCHKE

PRAGUE (AP)—Foreign diplomats have been warned by the government not to make any unannounced trips into Slovakia, scene of bloody rioting between Roman Catholics and Communist officials.

This new ban—against western diplomats at least—was disclosed in the Foreign Ministry's rejection of a diplomatic protest against the papal nunciature in Prague.

The announcement said "present circumstances" in the strong pro-Catholic eastern province made the restrictions necessary.

Informed church and diplomatic sources said Friday night that at least two Comunist policemen were beaten to death and an undetermined number of persons injured during recent clashes in Slovakia between Roman Catholics and government adherents.

RELIGIOUS HOLIDAYS

Meanwhile, the Comunist government moved to take over the big national religious holidays which start today and extend through Tuesday.

They will be marked by Catholic pilgrimages and celebrations honoring the missionaries St. Cyril and St. Methodius, and the monk St. Prokop.

Prague informants said Communist headquarters had passed out money to pay the fares of their adherents to the pilgrimage spots.

Verolino's case is believed to have set a precedent restricting travel of foreign envoys here.

The government claimed Verolino had no right to claim violation of diplomatic rights because he "twice disregarded challenges of traffic police to halt" while in Slovakia.

The nunciature called the ministry's claim 'absolutely false." It said armed men entered Verolino's car, forced him to drive to the police station where officers tried to question him.

Lewis Demands Cut In Work Hours For Soft Coal Miners

WASHINGTON (UP)—John L. Lewis has demanded that soft coal operators in the United States reduce his miners' work day from eight to seven hours without cutting their present take-home pay, industry sources said today.

This, they said, was the only specific money demand Lewis made during recent closed negotiations between the United Mine workers and soft coal producers at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

These sources said, however, that Lewis notified them he also wants a general hourly wage increase, bigger operator contributions to the welfare and retirement fund and establishment of the industry's first job seniority system.

The operators said they countered by telling Lewis the industry cannot afford any contract improvement which will increase production costs of coal. So far, they themselves have not made any specific contract proposals.

Growing Anti-Russian Drive In Soviet Zone

BERLIN (UP)—A growing anti-Russian underground movement in the Soviet Zone of Germany was reported today by a West Berlin newspaper.

A Leipzig dispatch to the British-licensed Sozialdemokrat said 473 persons were arrested by Soviet secret police for underground activity in the Soviet Zone during June.

The greatest concentration of the anti-Russian movement is in Saxony, the newspaper said.

The Russian-licensed press, meantime, demanded unification of divided Berlin, but made it plain this should bring much closer ties between Berlin and the Soviet Zone of Germany.

The first U.S. army passenger train to leave Berlin since the end of the railway strike departed for the West German port of Bremerhaven Friday night.

A shortage of locomotives was delaying the clearing of a backlog of freight trains which piled up between Western Germany and Berlin during the strike.

2 Blasts Felt In Shanghai

SHANGHAI (AP) — This city was shaken today by two heavy explosions believed to be bombs dropped by Nationalist planes resuming their raids on Shanghai.

The force of the explosions indicated the bombs were of heavy weight, possibly up to 500 pounds.

Residents reported the explosions seemed to come from the northeastern outskirts of the city.

There was no immediate confirmation. Communist authorities could not say whether bombs had been dropped.

SIGHTED BY SOME

A low overcast made it almost impossible to locate planes, although some persons reported they had sighted the raiders.

The Nationalists bombed Shanghai Wednesday, killing 155 Chinese and injuring an estimated 600 others.

(The raids are designed to back up a Nationalist order closing all Communist-held ports to shipping.)

April-May Dominion Surplus $252,300,000

OTTAWA (CP)—Finance Minister Abbott Friday night reported a surplus of nearly $252,300,000 for April and May—the first two months of the current fiscal year. That was nearly $3,000,000 less than the surplus for the same period of last year.

At the same time, he announced Canada's reserves of gold and United States dollars totaled $977,000,000 at the end of June, an increase from the reserve of $742,000,000 at the end of June last year but a drop from the reserves of $1,067,000,000 held at the end of March this year.

He said in a statement the drop in U.S. dollar reserves was due to the transfer of 1948 profits of foreign-owned companies in Canada. These companies were permitted to take their profits out of the country three months after the end of the fiscal year in which they were made.

The budget surplus resulted from expenditures of $230,700,000 and receipts of $483,000,000 during April and May. During the corresponding period last year, expenditures were $212,800,000 and receipts were $468,000,000.

Mr. Abbott said the large surplus for the two months could not be taken as any indication of the surplus for the whole year.

Tax Cuts Not Yet Shown

May revenues of $301,400,000—compared with $271,800,000 last year—did not reflect the tax cuts which came into effect earlier this year and were boosted by final settlements of 1948 income tax payments.

May expenditures were $155,900,000, compared with $146,200,000 for May, 1948, leaving a surplus for the month of $145,500,000.

Mr. Abbott said the effect of the tax cuts on government income would not become apparent until budget figures for June are available.

Income and corporation taxes were the biggest item of revenue during the two months. Corporation taxes totaled $91,700,000, income tax deducted at source was $60,800,000 and other income tax collections amounted to $155,900,000.

Biggest expenses were $50,200,000 for interest on public debt, $48,500,000 for family allowances and $27,200,000 for veterans' affairs.

Louise Brough Wins All-U.S. Final For Women At Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, Eng. (UP)—Louise Brough, the buxom blonde U.S. amateur queen from Beverly Hills, Calif., won the women's singles title in the Wimbledon Tennis Championships today for the second straight year by defeating Mrs. Margaret Osborne du Pont of Bellevue, Del., 10-8, 1-6, 10-8.

Miss Brough's victory, before a packed center court of 17,000 fans, marked the fourth year in a row that an American has won the women's singles crown. Mrs. du Pont was 1947 titlist and Pauline Betz of Los Angeles the 1946 champion.

The triumph also sent Miss Brough off to a good start in her aim to repeat her 1948 grand slam of all three titles open to women in the tournament. She is teamed with Mrs. du Pont in defence of the women's doubles title and with Jack Bromwich of Australia in defence of the mixed doubles crown.

25 Accidental Deaths While Canada Celebrates

By CANADIAN PRESS

The Dominion Day week-end celebration continues to roll along, with a heat wave in central Canada driving thousands of persons to the cool pleasures of beach and cottage.

Despite heavy traffic on highways and the general rush to lakes and rivers, the fatality toll for the start of the week-end has been light. A Canadian Press compilation showed that from midnight Thursday until early today, in all Canada 15 drownings were reported, seven traffic deaths and three fatalities from other causes.

Sports programs, including regattas, horse racing and baseball tournaments, were among the big attractions for the crowds celebrating Friday. But from now until the homeward trek starts Sunday night, most Canadians will be swimming, fishing, boating and lounging.

With the July 4 celebration in the United States falling on Monday, thousands of U.S. residents are thronging into Canada to spend the week-end. At the same time, many Canadians are celebrating by traveling to the United States.

For Dominion Day proper, the weather was good almost everywhere. The temperature soared to 92 degrees in Ottawa, 88 in Toronto, but it was cooler in the Maritimes and in the west.

Some 12,000 Scots from Canada and the United States attended highland games in Hamilton. In Ottawa, 4,000 persons, including cabinet ministers and diplomats, went to a garden party given by the Governor-General, Viscount Alexander. Canadian diplomats abroad held special receptions to mark Dominion Day.

Extend Contract On Day-To-Day Basis

DETROIT (UP)—Threat of a Ford Motor Company strike after July 15 faded today when the C.I.O. United Auto Workers agreed to extend their contract on a day-to-day basis.

Despite the extension, workers at Ford's key River Rouge and Lincoln-Mercury plants voted today on whether to authorize a walkout if negotiations remain deadlocked.

But the 100,000 Ford production workers will remain on their jobs after the contract expiration date July 15, subject to five working days notice of a walkout.

Fairbridge Boys Help Save Farm Buildings From Fire

Fire destroyed one building and was prevented from claiming others at the Fairbridge Farm School Friday by the boys themselves and others who formed a volunteer fire-fighting team.

The building destroyed was a two-story frame structure which housed seven or eight male members of the farm staff. They are believed to have lost all their personal belongings.

Accommodation was found for them overnight elsewhere on the farm, which at the present has considerably less than its maximum capacity in attendance.

The fire was noticed first by J. Brown, farm manager, who returned from Dominion Day celebrations in Duncan about noon. Cause of the fire is unknown but some believe a faulty chimney may have been the cause since the fire appeared to start in the second story.

Mrs. Brown telephoned the fire alarm and a call for farm employees and others to return to fight the fire was placed at the celebration. The farm has its own fire-fighting equipment, but most of the staff was away at the time.

A number of boys fishing in the Koksilah River nearby rushed back to the school and assisted the volunteer firemen in battling the blaze. They and the other firemen used hoses and buckets to dampen down the roofs of nearby buildings which were threatened by the sparks from the blazing bunkhouse.

The buildings threatened included the home of Mr. and Mrs. Brown.

The building destroyed was one of the original farm buildings, having been erected before the property was taken over by the Fairbridge institution.

Fairbridge Farm School is about five miles south of Duncan near Cowichan Station.

Asbestos Strikers To Work

ASBESTOS, Que. (CP)—Peace and quiet today reign over this Eastern Townships industrial town which Friday rocked with wild celebrations marking the end of the long, violence-ridden strike of asbestos workers.

Monday 2,000 workers will start returning to the jobs they left Feb. 13 in protest over the refusal of the companies to grant a 15-cent pay increase and improvement in working conditions.

When the full working force will be taken back was not made clear. One of the points agreed on by union officials and management was that the men would be put back "as rapidly as possible in accordance with the needs of production, taking into account seniority under the supervision of the director of the conciliation service."

2,500 NOW WORKING

The new agreement provides for:

The 2,000 all employees of the Canadian Johns-Manville Company, are the last of the asbestos strikers to return to work. Last month 2,500 employees of four smaller companies in the Thetford Mines area reached an agreement with their employers and went back to work.

Counter-Spy Units Urged To Retaliate

LONDON (CP)—R. J. Mellish, Labor Member of Parliament for Rotherhithe, charged today that Communists are egging on London's dock strikers. He asked for military counter-spy units to track them down.

After an on-the-spot investigation with three fellow members of the Comons aboard the Beaverbrae, one of two Canadian ships whose crew members provoked a sympathy work stoppage of more than 8,000 dockers, Mellish said:

"Disclosures there reveal what I believe to be an organized attempt to disrupt the country's economy and trade union loyalty of the London dockers, which is being exploited by the Communist elements."

He said he and the other M.P.s are sending this information to Home Secretary James Chuter Ede "for action by M.I.-5" (the war office counter-spy branch).

Mellish, himself the son of a dock worker, made the statement at a rally of workers whose leaders appealed for a quick return to work. The work stoppage, which left more than half the 160 ships in London idle, began a week ago when dockers refused to unload two Canadian ships.

The crews of the Canadian vessels went on strike after a walkout had been called by the Canadian Seamen's Union in Canada March 31 following signing of contracts between shipowners in the Dominion and the rival Seafarer's International Union (A.F.L.).

MEETING MONDAY

The so-called "central lockout committee of London dockworkers", scheduled a mass meeting for Monday to reply to Mellish's statement.

On another labor front, leaders of the National Union of Railwaymen attempted to squelch a rebellion of some locals which insist on starting a slow-down strike which union headquarters on Friday ordered abandoned.

Most branches of the N.U.R. agreed to call off the go-slow campaign scheduled to start at midnight Sunday, but some rail workers, including some from London's largest stations and one group from Manchester, demanded that the slowdown go into effect.

A circular sent out by the N.U.R. officers explained the instructions to call off the slowdown, which was originally planned to hasten settlement of the men's claims.

TO AVOID TENSION

The circular, it was understood, calls on members to allow their claim for a 10s. ($2) weekly wage raise to be dealt with in a reasonable atmosphere and not one of tension and duress in view of promised early intervention by the government.

This followed a statement in Parliament by Labor Minister George Isaacs, who offered his department's services to secure an early settlement of the dispute.

Isaacs is expected to set up a fact-finding court of inquiry.

Protest Canadian Competition For U.S. Lumber Orders

SEATTLE (AP)—A vigorous protest was being drafted today by the northwestern council of lumber and sawmill workers (A.F.L.) against permitting Canadian sawmills to compete with the Pacific northwest industry.

Canadian sawmills, paying lower wages, are getting much American business "while our men are walking the streets," John N. Christenson, council president, said.

The protest will be sent to congressional delegations and the army. Christenson said he had notice of an army bid call for 10,000,000 (M) feet of lumber, which carried the notation "Canadian bids acceptable."

As an example of such competition, he said, a Canadian mill underbid the Barbee Lumber Company of Renton Friday by $4.50 a thousand on lumber for a 30-unit apartment house only a mile from the Barbee plant.

Diplomats Warned Of Rioting In Slovakia

By RICHARD KASKISCHKE

PRAGUE (AP)—Foreign diplomats have been warned by the government not to make any unannounced trips into Slovakia, scene of bloody rioting between Roman Catholics and Communist officials.

This new ban—against western diplomats at least—was disclosed in the Foreign Ministry's rejection of a diplomatic protest against the papal nunciature in Prague.

The announcement said "present circumstances" in the strong pro-Catholic eastern province made the restrictions necessary.

TWO DEATHS REPORTED

Informed church and diplomatic sources said Friday night that at least two Comunist policemen were beaten to death and an undetermined number of persons injured during recent clashes in Slovakia between Roman Catholics and government adherents.

Meanwhile, the Comunist government moved to take over the big national religious holidays which start today and extend through Tuesday.

They will be marked by Catholic pilgrimages and celebrations honoring the missionaries St. Cyril and St. Methodius, and the the monk St. Prokop.

Prague informants said Communist headquarters had passed out money to pay the fares of their adherents to the pilgrimage spots.

CREATE PRECEDENT

Verolino's case is believed to have set a precedent restricting travel of foreign envoys here.

The government claimed Verolino had no right to claim violation of diplomatic rights because he "twice disregarded challenges of traffic police to halt" while in Slovakia.

The nunciature called the ministry's claim "absolutely false." It said armed men entered Verolino's car, forced him to drive to the police station where officers tried to question him.

Two Men Robbed In Holiday Attacks

An Indian and a white man were attacked and robbed in Victoria during the holiday, city police reported today.

Harry Butcher was brought to the police station at 1.20 Friday morning by taximan Lawrence Arnold. Butcher said he had been assaulted by three men south of the E. & N. yards.

"After beating me up they took the only money I had on me, 40 cents, my shoes and hat," he told police. He was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital to be treated for a severe lip cut, bruises and face and head contusions.

L. Peters, Indian, of Port Renfrew, told Constables Keith Hollett and Brian Ferguson that "some men attacked me and took my suit and $115." Police said Peters was unable to give further details at the time. At his own request the Indian was given lodgings overnight in the jail.

Mrs. Irene Grimes, 49, of San Francisco, lost $16,000 to Engel, Carmel said, when he disappeared with the funds she had given him when he promised to bring her aged mother and relatives out of Hungary.

Dies Of Injuries Suffered In Crash Seven Weeks Ago

Gravely injured in an accident at the intersection of Quadra and Fort Street on the afternoon of May 14, Mrs. Eleanor Davenport, 72, of 1174 Hewlett Place, died in Royal Jubilee Hospital Friday.

Dr. E. C. Hart, coroner, today set the inquest for 10 Tuesday morning at Hayward's B.C. Funeral Co.

Wilbert A. Drader, 3628 Douglas Street, has been charged with dangerous driving in city police court in connection with the accident which involved three automobiles and a bicycle.

According to the city police report on the accident, the Drader car was in collision with the car driven by William Davenport. The impact threw the Davenport car over on its side and policemen had to kick and claw the roof off the vehicle to get the injured Mrs. Davenport out. Police said the Drader car continued on and was in collision with a bicycle being pushed by Ernest J. Hume, and then with a car driven by Edward Bagshawe, 1405 Fernwood Road.

Hawaii Stevedores Spurn Peace Offer

HONOLULU (AP) — Stevedores of Hawaii have turned down a peace formula for the 63-day waterfront strike by a 10 to one margin and a settlement seems far away.

The International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union (C.I.O.) announced Friday the final vote against a fact-finding board's plan for a 14-cent hourly raise was 1,467 to 149.

The union appeared to be getting ready for a long struggle. Harry Bridges, head of the I.L.W.U., is expected by the middle of next week from San Francisco to take personal charge of the strike.

Guilty, Judith Coplon Sent To Jail As Spy For Reds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scorning a mercy plea, Judith Coplon was sentenced here to serve 40 months to 10 years in prison for attempting to betray her country as a spy for Russia.

The 28-year-old former government employee took the sentence without a quiver.

But in a bitter outburst, immediately before Judge Albert L. Reeves pronounced sentence Friday, she cried out:

"I understand I could plead for mercy. That I will not do. To me, pleading for mercy would be an admission of guilt."

Then, referring to prosecutors John M. Kelley and Raymond P. Whearty, she went on swiftly:

"I am innocent . . . I am innocent before all the Whearty's and all the Kelleys and all the government, whatever they want to do against me, and they may gloat in the glory of their hollow empiric victory . . .

"They want to break me. They will never break me!"

A few minutes later, with Miss Coplon staring coldly up at him, Judge Reeves pronounced sentence as the climax of a sensation-studded trial that had run for almost 10 weeks.

Sternly, the 75-year-old justice denounced Miss Coplon with an allusion to the American Revolutionary War traitor, Benedict Arnold, and he declared:

"I thoroughly approve of the verdict of the jury."

Miss Coplon will not go to prison immediately. Her attorney, Archibald Palmer of New York, said he will fight the case to the United States Supreme Court, if necessary.

Caterpillars, Now Missing, Building Up For Return

Where are the pesky caterpillars which used to infest the trees and foliage hereabouts at this time of the year?

The southern end of Vancouver Island appears to be free of the caterpillar hordes right now, but scientists, although unable to say when, predict they will return in future seasons.

William Downes, former entomologist for the government here, reported today that the caterpillars are probably at the low of the cycle and may be on the increase during the next few years.

"I haven't seen very many this year," he reported. "There are practically none."

The ebb and flow of the caterpillar hordes in this area is a typical balance of nature. The caterpillars are kept under a certain control by parasites and other factors.

When the caterpillars are few in number the parasites are likewise few. The caterpillars, however, probably exceed in combined strength the parasite force, so that the caterpillar force will increase.

But with the increase of caterpillars, more parasites can be maintained. In a few years when the caterpillars reach huge numbers here, the parasites will also be gaining strength.

Generally, the cycle of caterpillars here seems to work out at seven to 10 years.

Mr. Downes is confident there will be another invasion of the caterpillars sometime in the future but how extensive and when it will reach its zenith he does not know.

25 Accidental Deaths While Canada Celebrates

By CANADIAN PRESS

The Dominion Day week-end celebration continues to roll along, with a heat wave in central Canada driving thousands of persons to the cool pleasures of beach and cottage.

Despite heavy traffic on highways and the general rush to lakes and rivers, the fatality toll for the start of the week-end has been light. A Canadian Press compilation showed that from midnight Thursday until early today, in all Canada 15 drownings were reported, seven traffic deaths and three fatalities from other causes. Five of the deaths were in B.C.

Sports programs, including regattas, horse racing and baseball tournaments, were among the big attractions for the crowds celebrating Friday. But from now until the homeward trek starts Sunday night, most Canadians will be swimming, fishing, boating and lounging.

With the July 4 celebration in the United States falling on Monday, thousands of U.S. residents are thronging into Canada to spend the week-end. At the same time, many Canadians are celebrating by traveling to the United States.

For Dominion Day proper, the weather was good almost everywhere. The temperature soared to 92 degrees in Ottawa, 88 in Toronto, but it was cooler in the Maritimes and in the west.

Some 12,000 Scots from Canada and the United States attended highland games in Hamilton. In Ottawa, 4,000 persons, including cabinet ministers and diplomats, went to a garden party given by the Governor-General, Viscount Alexander. Canadian diplomats abroad held special receptions to mark Dominion Day.

Crowds Attracted To Duncan Celebration

By Special Correspondent

DUNCAN—The beat of Indian tom-toms, the whirr of the power-saw and the click of tree climbers mingled here July 1 in the gala medley of sights and sounds that make the Duncan Dominion Day Carnival one of the island's most colorful celebrations.

Thousands gathered from all parts of the island and mainland to be on hand for the mammoth parade Friday morning and then were set for a day of action and fun.

The native Indian dancing, shown for the first time this year, proved so popular it will become an annual event.

The keenly-competed loggers' sports had so many entries preliminary events had to be run off in the power-sawing contest before Nick Millinko and Phil Whittaker were declared winners.

In spite of threatening clouds and dull weather, thousands started to collect on the sidewalks Friday morning to see the monster parade which was headed by the children's entries. Gaily decorated bicycles and domestic animals of all kinds were proudly shown by the youngsters.

Floats to secure first place in their respective classes were: Oddfellows, Rebekahs, C.G.I.T. Indian float, Bill Foster's Little Lulu and Stewart Hudson Lumber Co. The T. Eaton Company's float which carried the Cowichan lumber queen, Hilda Meuffels, was a great attraction in the parade.

Mayor J. C. Wragg introduced Major-Gen. George R. Pearkes, V.C., M.P., to the crowd gathered at athletic park to see the crowning ceremony.

Gen. Pearkes, after a brief address, declared the carnival open. Eleanor Ferguson, the retiring 1948 queen surrendered her crown to Miss Meuffels and declared her queen for the ensuing year. At 1 o'clock, the Elk's Lodge superintended the kiddies' sports, which is an annual event for children up to 13 years of age.

Highlight of the day for the youngsters was the tent housing Ross Mortimer and his kiddies' carnival program. This and the pony rides shared equally in the attention of the children and both the tent and pony enclosure were occupied to capacity throughout the afternoon.

LOGGERS' SPORTS

In a community that is the centre of the logging industry on the island loggers' sports are a "natural." There was an overflow number of entries.

The open chopping event for the B.C. championship was won by Phil Whittaker. The tree climbing always a major attraction, and won for five consecutive years by Carlos Waldie was won this year by R. Pappenberger, who made the ascent and descent in 32 seconds.

The Victoria Girls' Pipe Band and the Cowichan District Band played selections during the afternoon. One feature of the program which pleased the crowd was the native Indian dancing. The 12 Indians in their colorful native costumes weaving in and out to the sound of tom-toms and Indian calls, was an outstanding event of the day.

The clouds of the morning gave way to bright sunshine during the afternoon to make perfect holiday weather.

Due to a large entry in the horse show, in the agricultural grounds, some of the events had to be eliminated in the evening show, because of failing light.

The enthusiastic crowd witnessed some fine riding and jumping with many outside horses competing. The high quality of horseflesh and horsemanship made judging difficult.

The champion horse of the show was Countess Gean, shown by Mrs. D. Watney, and the best bred Cowichan horse was Miss Joan Dunlop's Fairy. Edward Lister won the open jumping event on Flash.

The judges were Norman Drysdale, Mrs. Adele McDermott and Miss Pamela Scott Reid.

A dance under the auspices of the volunteer fire department closed the evening. The Agricultural Hall was thronged as couples danced to the strains of Slim Braulins' orchestra.

Mel Fletcher was official announcer over the loudspeaker. W. D. Chappell was program manager, and Harry Peile, general carnival chairman.

To complete the holiday weekend the baseball association arranged for seven games today and Sunday at Athletic Park.

Alderman Looks For Support In Opposing Boost

City Council may oppose the B.C. Telephone Company's application for rate increases.

Ald. John Baxter is fighting the application and he hopes the entire council will move with him. The question will be aired next Tuesday when council meets.

Ald. Baxter is arguing that telephone users should not be asked to pay for future investments of the company.

The company, in its application to the Board of Transport Commissioners for higher rates, said that capital for expansion and improvement of existing services could only be attracted if higher rates are approved.

"I don't see why the present users of telephones should have to pay the interest on future company expenditures as indicated in reports describing the application," Ald. Baxter stated.

The alderman said the company may not have increased rates in the last 28 years, but some people felt rates in effect have been too high.

He remembered that in October, 1937, City Council attempted to secure a reduction in telephone charges. A request for a meeting with company officials was made in vain, he said.

April-May Dominion Surplus $252,300,000

OTTAWA (CP)—Finance Minister Abbott Friday night reported a surplus of nearly $252,300,000 for April and May—the first two months of the current fiscal year. That was nearly $3,000,000 less than the surplus for the same period of last year.

At the same time, he announced Canada's reserves of gold and United States dollars totaled $977,000,000 at the end of June, an increase from the reserve of $742,000,000 at the end of June last year but a drop from the reserves of $1,067,000,000 held at the end of March this year.

He said in a statement the drop in U.S. dollar reserves was due to the transfer of 1948 profits of foreign-owned companies in Canada. These companies were permitted to take their profits out of the country three months after the end of the fiscal year in which they were made.

The budget surplus resulted from expenditures of $230,700,000 and receipts of $483,000,000 during April and May. During the corresponding period last year, expenditures were $212,800,000 and receipts were $468,000,000.

Mr. Abbott said the large surplus for the two months could not be taken as any indication of the surplus for the whole year.

Tax Cuts Not Yet Shown

May revenues of $301,400,000—compared with $271,800,000 last year—did not reflect the tax cuts which came into effect earlier this year and were boosted by final settlements of 1948 income tax payments.

May expenditures were $155,900,000, compared with $146,200,000 for May, 1948, leaving a surplus for the month of $145,500,000.

Mr. Abbott said the effect of the tax cuts on government income would not become apparent until budget figures for June are available.

Income and corporation taxes were the biggest item of revenue during the two months. Corporation taxes totaled $91,700,000, income tax deducted at source was $60,800,000 and other income tax collections amounted to $155,900,000.

Biggest expenses were $50,200,000 for interest on public debt, $48,500,000 for family allowances and $27,200,000 for veterans' affairs.

Efforts of six veterinarians failed to save the life of a Dailey Bros. Circus baby elephant Thursday. The animal is shown above with elephant keepers. The youngster, a member of the large herd of elephants which took part in the show, died from a parasitic disease at Victoria West Park, it was reported today.

Dr. G. H. Keown and five out-of-town veterinarians attending a convention here, were called to examine the animal. Every effort was made to revive the elephant, which for sometime had been acting queerly.

Victoria enjoyed 36 hours more sunshine last month than is usual for June, the weather statisticians at the Dominion Meteorological Observatory atop Gonzales Hill reported today.

Their instruments, they say, recorded a total of 315 hours of sunshine for the 30-day period.

There is plenty of citrus fruit in town. Orange prices are expected to drop slightly next week. Lemons may go higher.

Wholesale supplies of apples are just about exhausted. First of the new crop will be on the market in about three weeks' time, however.

A few black and red currants are being sold now. They are grown locally.

Some seedless grapes from California were received this week. Further shipments are expected.

Make Early Start On Office Building

B.C. Power Commission plans an early start on construction of its office building on a triangular piece of property bounded by Blanshard, Burdett and McClure.

Henry Whittaker, government architect, made this clear in a letter to the City Council for the blasting of a large outcropping of rock on Burdett near its intersection with Blanshard, and he said the Power Commission would bear the expense of the work provided it could use the rock blasted for fill.

Mr. Whittaker asked that a decision be handed down as soon as possible "as the commission wishes to proceed with its plans in the very near future."

Fairbridge Boys Help Save Farm Buildings From Fire

Fire destroyed one building and was prevented from claiming others at the Fairbridge Farm School Friday by the boys themselves and others who formed a volunteer fire-fighting team.

The building destroyed was a two-story frame structure which housed seven or eight male members of the farm staff. They are believed to have lost all their personal belongings.

Accommodation was found for them overnight elsewhere on the farm, which at the present has considerably less than its maximum capacity in attendance.

The fire was noticed first by J. Brown, farm manager, who returned from Dominion Day celebrations in Duncan about noon. Cause of the fire is unknown but some believe a faulty chimney may have been the cause since the fire appeared to start in the second story.

Mrs. Brown telephoned the fire alarm and a call for farm employees and others to return to fight the fire was placed at the celebration. The farm has its own fire-fighting equipment, but most of the staff was away at the time.

A number of boys fishing in the Koksilah River nearby rushed back to the school and assisted the volunteer firemen in battling the blaze. They and the other firemen used hoses and buckets to dampen down the roofs of nearby buildings which were threatened by the sparks from the blazing bunkhouse.

The buildings threatened included the home of Mr. and Mrs. Brown.

The building destroyed was one of the original farm buildings, having been erected before the property was taken over by the Fairbridge institution.

Fairbridge Farm School is about five miles south of Duncan near Cowichan Station.

Donald Jacobson, nine years old, 640 Dunedin Street, was given first aid treatment for a cut on the forehead after he had hit the curb with his head on jumping from a moving tally-ho at Government and Broughton Streets Friday, city police reported. Police said the driver did not know the boy had climbed aboard the horse-drawn vehicle.

THE PRESS INQUIRY

ANY AUTHORITATIVE INVESTIGATION of newspaper practice in a land which is the home of such adornments to the profession as The Times of London, the Manchester Guardian and the Edinburgh Scotsman—and a nation, too, which produces some of the most sensational tabloid fare—merits consideration from all who have applied critical faculties to the study of modern journalism. This alone lends specific weight to the findings and recommendations of the Royal Commission on the Press released this week in London.

We mention the extremes in British publications to emphasize the fact that, within its terms of reference, the commission had an almost unlimited variety of sources from which to draw its conclusions. Furthermore, we suggest that this condition furnishes a range of material within which the publications of Canada and other countries that enjoy complete freedom might legitimately find their place. As a logical sequence, the argument is advanced that the conclusions of the commission, as applied to British newspapers, might with equal justification be used as a guide and measure for their Canadian counterparts.

It is not surprising that the Royal Commission's report—a document of 250,000 words compiled in a period of more than two years—should reject all proposals for government control of the press. Nor will eyebrows be raised over the mention made by that body of the fact that rarity of subsidies is one of the notable features of the British newspaper industry. What may cause some discomfort to cantankerous critics, however, is the commission's refutation of suggestions that political bias constantly operated in the industry.

The last mentioned covers a charge that is loosely directed at opposing newspapers by individuals of the sharpest political bias. The accusation finds its loudest expression, perhaps, in the clamorous invectives hurled at the so-called "capitalist" press by those extremists whose own organs are so one-eyed that they can display no vestige of fairness in their columns.

No less significant is the commission's report that it found no evidence of pressure by advertisers to influence omission or insertion of news items. This does not entirely discount the possibility that advertisers may have asked for favors. It does, on the other hand, furnish evidence of the practice of editors to weigh the matters which may have been submitted and to accept or reject them on the basis of their news values.

There are many other points raised by the report. Those referred to above, however, provide ample rebuttal to ill-considered assertions by some elements which seek to imply a venal purpose to the presentation of news, and to attack the integrity of those newspapers with which they disagree by means of unsupported allegations of pressure from sinister sources.

Such people find it difficult to imagine that a newspaper policy which differs from their own point of view is not the creation of evil forces. Rather than respect the honest thought which has gone into the framing of policy, they resort to innuendo or outright expressions of distrust of the elements which compose it.

The Royal Commission's findings should assist materially in counteracting such poison and in encouraging criticism that is honest and constructive.

JOINED THE LIBERALS

ERSTWHILE SIR ARTHUR FREDERICK RICHARDS, now Baron Milverton of Lagos, crossed the floor of the House of Lords the other day to signify his objection to the British Labor government's decision to nationalize the iron and steel industry.

In severing his connection with the Labor Party he said he was born free and spent the bulk of his life—he is 64—in teaching what freedom means to "somewhat reluctant pupils in backward countries." He amplified his remark this way:

"I am very loath at my time of life to reverse this process and to endeavor to sell the advantages of slavery to a people who were once free. Perhaps it is because my own experience in administration has shown me how unrestricted bureaucracy can strangle enterprise that I feel some doubts about the widening circles of government controls. The road on which we are traveling leads to a precipice at the foot of which clearly emerges the totalitarian state."

We are told that this distinguished public servant spoke to a hushed House and, after he had made his decision, walked across the chamber and sat with the Liberals. He has probably observed since what Canadians think of the dangers of a too close approach to the "precipice."

Labor peer Baron Milverton was a former colonial governor in Africa, the Far East and West Indies, retiring from the colonial service at the end of 1947. He joined the Socialist Party soon afterward.

STRAIGHTENING THE MATTER

OUR MORNING CONTEMPORARY THE other day bemoaned the fact that the provinces of Canada had not appointed the Bank of Canada to act as their fiscal agent.

It is well understood, of course, that a successful agency by the central bank depends upon the willingness of all the provinces to employ that bank to carry out agency functions. The use of such a central bank, however, does not guarantee uniform market rates, and is helpful only with respect to the timing of provincial borrowings.

What the argument employed by the Colonist fails to take into consideration is the further fact that the investing public still determines the worth of any security. It is the investor who has the final say as to what the credit rating of a bond may be. Purchase of bonds is still a voluntary act in this country.

With regard to the last issue of $11,000,000 of British Columbia debentures, our contemporary again is at fault when it compares a cost price to the seller on the one hand with a cost to the public on the other. In this instance, this province's bonds were sold to the public at a yield rate of 3.15, and this rate compares with the sale of Nova Scotia's to the public at 3.25. It is also noteworthy that issue is taken with the repayment of temporary loans by refunding processes. This is the conventional and normal practice of governments when they exercise their borrowing authorities; they issue short-term notes to a bank from time to time until the accumulation of treasury bills warrants their conversion into long-term securities.

The British Columbia bonds referred to represented nothing but an out-and-out refunding process, or a conversion of one-year treasury bills into 15-year debentures, which will be repayable in full on their maturity.

'DEAD OR ALIVE'

THERE IS A BREATH OF THE STILL-existent frontier in the news item which reports that the Swedish community of Mission City, in this province, has combined to offer a reward for the fugitive killer of two local women in an effort to remove the threat of violent vengeance that currently shadows their days and terrorizes their nights. But it was not merely a matter of subscribing money to a fund. The economic affairs of some of the inhabitants did not permit that easy method. Instead, the winner of the reward will find himself the owner of 10 chickens, a calf, an apple crop, the yield of two pear trees and two dollars in cash. That is not a big reward as such matters go. But it represents in a very heart-felt way the contribution of these people toward removing the current threat to the safety of their homes and families. Who wins it will have won much more than money. He will have earned sincere gratitude, which money could not buy.

LATE BUT WELCOME

IN A MOVE THAT WOULD APPEAR TO outsiders as belated, Alabama this week passed legislation that prohibits the wearing of masks in public—a blow at the Ku Klux Klan and similar organizations that seek immunity for cowardly activities by hiding the identity of members. A recent outbreak of violence by masked groups, including the beating of a woman and the terrorizing of a storekeeper, apparently led the state authorities to take action at last. The Alabama Legislature in addition has been urged by its Attorney-General to revoke the Klan charter—a move that would do much to clean up the bad state of affairs indicated by the existence of such subversive groups.

It is one thing to remove masks from faces, however; another to remove them from minds. The type of person who would take part in Klan floggings and terror tactics needs more than legislation to cure him. A thorough education in the decencies of human behavior is a prior requisite.

SUMMER RAIN

LIKE SOME POLITICIANS, SUMMER rain comes in different guises to different adults. To many it falls softly as Shakespeare's quality of mercy, blessing the earth that receives it. To others it is a force transforming buoyant spirits to a dull grey depression that reflects the clouds from which it comes. It may be the source of irritation and annoyance to those who have prepared for outdoor events. Or, to the philosophical, it may be the reviving influence tritely described as "good for the gardens."

But to the venturesome child it is something again—a novelty to break the sustained rhythm of good days, an agent to change the routine of pleasures that are beginning to pall. Indoors there are acquaintances to be renewed with half forgotten toys and table games. And for the fortunate, there are waterproofs and rubbers to be taken from their closets, and donned for explorations of an outdoor world that has been subtly altered and freshened by the downpour.

In a return to winter regalia, the child can find again the intoxication of wading through puddles, watching the clouds of dirt particles that are stirred by errant feet, damming the small rivulets where stored waters break through their accidental dikes. The turf takes on a new springiness. The trees in heavy leaf yield a quick shower to rattle on rain hats as a breeze stirs them. The robins are busy on the lawn, catching worms. It is an interesting new world to the child who has not troubled to plan and has not learned the frustrations of uncooperative weather.

A New Coalfield

By EDWARD HODGKIN From London

THE BASIC WEALTH of any country is the land; the earth which gives life to the crops, the rivers which provide water and power, and the minerals which lie hidden under the earth. In all these assets Britain is rich, but we keep more of our riches beneath the surface than on top of it. It might be thought that, because Britain is small, we have long since surveyed and catalogued all our resources, but this is not the case. We have long known, for example, of the general line which one of our greatest coalfields follows across the Midlands of England, but it was only a week or two ago that geologists were able to confirm the existence of a huge new field at Whittington Heath, just outside the cathedral city of Lichfield, where Dr. Johnson was born.

THIS FIELD is estimated to contain a minimum of 400,000,000 tons of good quality workable coal, and probably much more. Only a day after its existence had been announced an official of Britain's National Coal Board came along with the story of a second new field, eight miles from the first one, which promises almost equally good results. Between the sinking of the bores, by which the seams are discovered, and the actual working of new pits to exploit them, an enormous amount of work has to be done. It is a question of economics as much as of geology or engineering. It has been reckoned that at the Whittington field there must be two years' work, including the sinking of more bore-holes, before there can be enough evidence to decide whether to start exploiting the field straight away, and if the decision then is favorable, it will take another six years before the coal begins to arrive at the surface.

ALL THE SAME, in spite of this necessary caution, these discoveries make some of the best industrial news we have had in Britain for a long time. A few years ago it was estimated that while the proved reserves of coal in the Midlands were little short of 4,000,000,000 tons, the reserves in the Cannock Chase area of the Midlands (where the two new fields are located) only accounted for about a quarter of this figure. This meant, it was reckoned, that production in Britain would begin to fall in about 1954, and by the end of the century might be down to only half of what it is today.

But with this new discovery the life of the Cannock Chase coalfield will be extended for the next 50 years or so, and the next two or three generations of miners will not have to move from their homes. What is more, it has been promised by the coal board that when the new workings get going, "We shall show the country what a coalfield should look like. There will be an ultra-modern mining village and underground workings will be the best possible."

THIS MEANS that we are not going to create a sprawling, unsightly mining town in the middle of Cannock Chase, parts of which are still open heath, relics of the days when vast tracts of England were untouched by the hand of man. In the past two or three centuries Britain's expanding population has encroached on the old forest lands, and timber is one of the raw products which we in Britain have to look abroad for. During the war we cut down a lot of trees which normally would have been allowed to go on growing for many more years, and it will be a long time before plantings catch up with war-time losses.

THE OTHER DAY parliament turned its attention to the problem of restocking our woods and forests. It is a problem which has to be tackled both from the point of view of economics and amenities; we have to determine what trees give the best return of timber as well as what trees look best in the landscape. The government helps by providing grants of money up to as much as three-quarters of the cost for replanting. That is mostly in publicly-owned land, parks and so on. But there are 3,000,000 acres of privately-owned land, and the owners of about 2,000,000 of these co-operate with the forestry commission in planning their control and development, in exchange for which they also receive replanting grants.

A Cherry Pie

New York Times

CHERRIES are ripening, the red pie cherries which have color and tang and personality. Now is the time to make cherry jam and cherry pie, if you really know how. Cherry jam happens to be one of the best of all confections, but because it requires a cook who is also a connoisseur not a great many people undertake it. No such good fortune prevails with cherry pie. The notion seems to be abroad that anyone with a pie pan and a bowl of cherries can make a cherry pie, and nothing could be further from the truth.

It takes an artist to make a cherry pie worth the name—a person able, willing and patient.

It sounds simple, and it is simple, when the right person does it. The result, depending on the maker, can be magnificent, or dismal. As we said, it is essentially a matter of art. And, unfortunately, there are too few artists around when cherries ripen.

The lynching of negroes in the south is no more evil nor more disgraceful to our country's name than is this silly wholesale accusation being made against random persons, high and low, ignorantly accusing them of communism, fellow-travelerism, what not.—Novelist Pearl Buck.

In dealing with Orientals, it is well to have a mind that works like that of an Oriental. Molotov has it, and that is one reason why western diplomats had so much trouble with him. 'ROUND THE CORNER'

New York Times

In another week or so Grand Central Terminal will resemble Madison Square Garden at circus time. There will be the same milling crowd of the excited young, subdued here and there by harassed and gloomy representatives of the old. Trains will leave bursting at the windows with noise like that of a crazed jazz drummer, and home that night will seem strangely quiet. That will be good; indeed, that will be the point. Although the statement may be regarded as a product of advanced cynicism, sending the children away to camp is much like turning off the radio and it has as pleasing a sound. That is the dividend paid by going without necessities all year in order to send the children to camp. Someone should write a ten-volume monograph on silence, and a week or so from now will be the obvious time to start it. Volume 1, Page 1—"The children left for camp this morning, and . . ."

Letter To The Editor

AN APPRECIATION

"Oh, the little more, and how much it is!
And the little less, and what worlds away!"
—Robert Browning.

Last week the Victoria Players' Guild in its production, "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," achieved "the little more" with sincerity and charm. Here was an unfettered yet restrained production; emphasis without distortion or exaggeration; and a fine sensitivity to mood and situation throughout. Moreover, the illusion of reality was so complete that the audience became an inseparable part of the moving drama of life at No. 50 Wimpole Street in the London of 1845.

There are many to praise in such a production, but space permits me to name but one—Audrey St. Denys Johnson, whose fine and unerring direction of "The Barretts" has set up a high standard of achievement for theatre art in Victoria.

Crabs---Clothes No Problem

QUESTIONS of style and price hold no problems for the shore crabs of this district when they wish to renew their covering. They simply doff the old and appear in a new suit. The process, frequent in earlier periods of life, gradually settles down to a yearly change. At that stage of life a conservative dark brown or grey is satisfactory—and it wears well.

There are two species of shore crabs commonly found under stones on Victoria beaches. One is distinguished from the other by the presence of hairy patches on the "nippers" or claws.

The average size of the shell, or carapace, is approximately one and one-half inches, although some reach two inches. That represents full growth for the species, which should not be confused with the earlier stages of the commercial crab.

The smaller types have the usual crab features; four pairs of walking legs, one pair of pinchers, eyes on movable stalks, chewing mouth parts, and a shell with movable parts. Breathing is accomplished by means of gills in a gill chamber, and the crab can be removed from water and survive for some time provided the gills are kept moist. They feed on smaller creatures which they catch with their claws and also on recently dead animals.

After mating the eggs are laid by the female and are carried under the body attached to the hairs of the leg-like appendages beneath the flap-like abdomen. The larvae which hatch do not resemble crabs in the least. They have large heads and long tails with long spines. Not much bigger than a pinhead at this stage, they swim freely.

The larvae go through a series of moults, shedding shells and assuming a shape a little more like that of a conventional crab, but still retaining the free swimming ability. With each moult they increase in size until they finally become too heavy to swim. They then settle to the bottom in the adult form, though in miniature.

Further growth is accomplished by additional series of moults, several in the first year. When adult size is reached the shell is changed but once annually.

In moulting, the entire shell is cast. It splits at the rear and the crab emerges backward, pulling each limb free of its old casing. The eye covering and even the lining of the stomach are changed. Released from its "old clothes" the crab swells to a larger size, the new shell being soft like wet paper. For a time it retires to a place of safety until the new shell hardens, returning later to its familiar haunts and repeating the moult when the shell becomes too tight again.

Its principal enemies are certain fish and birds, the octupus and raccoons along the shore.—A. H. S.—G. C. C.

Removing Class Distinction

India Information Service

THE removal of social disabilities of the Scheduled Castes (former Untouchables) in several provinces has been followed by positive measures to improve their lot.

In the United Provinces, for instance, the budget provision for their education has increased from $180,000 in 1946-47 to $450,000 during the current year. In the case of Momin Ansars (a backward section of the Muslims) it has increased from $3,000 to $25,000 and for other backward classes from $12,000 to $50,000.

MORE STUDENTS

The number of Scheduled Caste students in the U.P. rose from 153,000 in 1946-47 to 230,000 last year. The majority are exempt from fees; many get stipends too.

Welfare schemes for these people in the U.P. will expand following creation of a Harijan Aid Department. This year provision for Harijan welfare, including education, is $675,000.

The government of Hyderabad has promulgated two regulations expressly stating certain rights conferred on Harijans (Scheduled Castes).

EQUALITY

The first—"The Harijan Temple Entry Regulation"—declares that every temple shall be open to Harijans for worship to the same extent as to other Hindus. The second regulation gives Harijans the right of entry to any place of public amusement or entertainment. It also allows them the benefit of Hindu Charitable Trusts. Contravention is punishable with imprisonment or fine.

Harijans in the State are already receiving economic help from the Depressed Classes Trust Fund.

Take a Gamble

Edmonton Journal

It would be a fine thing if Canadian capital came into Alberta in a really big way. But it will have to do its own exploration and wild-catting. It cannot expect to come along after American capital has been spent by the scores of millions in "proving" a field and then be able to pick up an apparently sure thing investment cheaply. If it wants to risk its money in proven fields only, it will have to pay high for leases of crown lands; in fact, it should be thankful that the provincial government's policy of checkerboarding proven acreage gives it an opportunity to lease already tested tracts.

GLOBAL SURVEY

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press News Analyst

ENGLAND'S historic Penzance Bay is the scene of a naval experiment which is calculated to result in the creation of a united Western European fleet for defence against aggression.

British, French and Netherlands men-of-war are massed in the bay, while smaller Belgian warships are engaged in separate manoeuvres with British vessels in neighboring waters.

It is the beginning of an effort to co-ordinate the widely varying methods of these fleets so that they can work as one.

That's far from being as easy as it sounds. The different languages in themselves are a hazard for co-ordination.

NOT FIRST TIME

Of course this isn't the first time that British, French and Netherlands warships have operated together, for they joined with United States ships to form the Allied eastern fleet based at Ceylon during the last war.

My colleague Charles Grumich with the Allied navy in the Far East during the war, tells me the consensus of naval officers concerned was that there were a good many rough spots in the operations of the combined fleets. By way of illustration Grumich says:

"This fleet made a series of 'club runs,' as they called them, going out once a month to lay barrages and carrier air-strikes on the Andaman and Nicobar Islands and Sumatra and Java.

SARATOGA CELEBRATION

"Arrival of the U.S.S. Saratoga, a rather ungainly old carrier from the Pacific, led to a lot of celebrating. The British were so happy that they changed over to American signal flags, not knowing that the Saratoga had changed over to British signal flags. They had a helluva time making signals for a while.

"The real snafu came when the French battle-wagon Richelieu joined the fleet. Saratoga signalled over, asking if there was anything Richelieu needed. The French came back with a request for 1,000 brassieres and the American gobs were just about to swim over to see why when a French linguist discovered that's what the French call lifejackets."

Well, that's a page out of the past. Penzance Bay may well be seeing the beginning of a new era in Allied naval co-ordination.

Blind Chance

Ottawa Journal

We greatly doubt that compulsory voting would give us a better House of Commons or one more truly representing the public will. It would make chance too much a factor in close decisions. The remedy for the indifferent citizen is not to drag him (or her) to the polls but somehow to persuade him (or her) to take an intelligent interest in politics and government. The haphazard vote compulsorily cast is no guide to public opinion.

King, Queen Attend Service Dominion Day In Abbey

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

LONDON (CP)—The King and Queen joined Canadian officials and their families in a moving and impressive Dominion Day service in New Westminster Abbey.

Facing the high altar, with its massive gold plate shimmering in the light of a hundred candles, C. B. Cowley, Canada Club secretary, presented two chairs and faldstools to the Dean of Westminster, Very Rev. Alan C. Don.

The club's gift is a memorial to Canadians who died in the Second World War.

After it had been accepted, Their Majesties mounted the altar steps to the sanctuary where the chairs and faldstools—intended for the use of royalty at divine service—were used for the first time.

Queen Elizabeth wore a dress of pale lupin blue, ornamented with a small maple leaf brooch. The King was dressed in formal morning attire instead of the naval uniform he usually wears.

Both listened gravely as the Dean dedicated the gift. "To be treasured here as adornment of this sanctuary and a symbol of the loyalty to the throne of the oldest of His Majesty's Dominions."

Earlier the King and Queen had been received at the Abbey's great west door by the Dean and chapter and L. Dana Wilgress, Canadian High Commissioner to Britain.

Mr. Wilgress read the lesson, which was from Book I, Chapter VII, of Kings.

ADDRESS BY DR. LOWE

Choral music by the Abbey choir preceded the address, delivered by Dr. John Lowe, Calgary-born dean of Christ Church and Vice-Chancellor of Oxford University.

The service ended with the singing of "O Canada" and "God Save The King."

Then the congregation filed to the altar to look at the royal chairs, made of Canadian birch, darkly stained and polished. They are of venetian pattern, each with a maple leaf carved at the front. The faldstools bear the arms of Canada.

B.C. Veteran Heads British Committee Probing Tax Set

By DON GILBERT

LONDON (CP)—James Millard Tucker headed east from Vancouver with the Canadian army in 1914. He has never gone back.

Today, at 56, he is Britain's leading specialist in tax litigation. He rakes in the shekels to the tune of £20,000 ($80,000) a year.

Right now he's in the news as the newly-named chairman of a committee which will probe Britain's business tax setup.

Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer, designated Tucker and five others to study complaints of business leaders that the treasury, by taking too big a bite out of business revenues, is eating away at the sources of industrial capital.

A chance decision after he was invalided out of military service caused Tucker to pass up an accounting career in British Columbia and practice law in London.

He was articled to a Vancouver firm of chartered accountants when hostilities broke out. He joined the 29th Battalion and soon was overseas.

Tucker returned to his accounting studies in London in 1917. The B.C. Institute of Chartered Accountants sent over his final examination papers. He wrote them in a solitary sitting. But Tucker also had been reading for law. He decided not to return to Canada and was called to the bar in 1920.

APPEARED IN APPEALS

Occasionally he was briefed to appear for one or another of the Canadian provincial governments in Privy Council appeals.

But more and more he stuck to taxation cases. Today he is the best known of a small group of barristers handling a postwar "boom" in tax litigation.

His interests extend to big business. He is chairman of a large textile organization, deputy chairman of a chemical manufacturing company and a director of Carreras, the tobacco concern.

Tucker is a lively, energetic man, a yachtsman and a follower of sports. He recalls with relish his service with the 29th Battalion.

"My colonel was H. S. Tobin, president of Vancouver Breweries," he said. "The battalion was called 'Tobin's Tigers' and was a mixture of lumberjacks, miners from Prince Rupert, clerks, shop assistants, remittance men—a curious collection."

Four Island Firms Listed In Week's Incorporations

Three Victoria companies were among the week's list of incorporations at the offices of Stanley W. Taylor, registrar of companies.

They were Cadboro Estates Ltd., 50,000 N.P.V. shares; Victoria Hockey Club, $10,000, and Sangster's Veteran Auto Court Ltd. One up-island company was listed, Wellington-Nanaimo Distributors, $10,000, Nanaimo.

Little Girl Loses Life

BASSANO, Alta. (CP) — A two-year-old girl was drowned Friday when she fell into an eight-gallon earthenware crock in a neighbor's yard. Body of Linda Ann Marriott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Marriott of Bassano, was found about two hours after she had tumbled into the big vessel. It is believed she overbalanced and fell in while peering into the vessel.

CROSSWORD PUZZLE SOLUTION

No Early Closing

LADYSMITH — Proposal for early Saturday night closing of certain categories of stores failed to gain the required 75 per cent approval here.

A petition called for repeal of all existing retail by-laws and drawing up of a new one, requiring all furniture, appliance, drygoods, and other stores in that category, to close at 6, Saturday night.

The petition lacked the 75 per cent of names required by the Shops Regulation Act, the City Council ruled. Stores in the group at present remain open until 9, Saturday night.

Psalms: Poetic Religion

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D.D.

During coming weeks many Sunday schools will be studying lessons in the Biblical Book of Psalms. The comment in these columns is directed to many readers not in Sunday Schools, but interested in religion and the study of the Bible.

It is my hope that it may be of help to those who teach and learn in Sunday School. But, in view of this wider constituency, it is my aim not to confine the comment to any particular theme, or lesson, but to present backgrounds, highlights and illuminating details. The object is to increase the intelligent use of the Bible and bring its guidance and inspiration into immediate influence upon character and daily life. This is particularly necessary in contemplating and studying the Book of The Psalms.

The Book of Psalms must be studied as a whole, if one would grasp their nature and significance in the faith, worship and life of ancient Israel, and their place and effect in relation to religious life in general.

MOODS AND EMOTIONS

Only as one reads the Psalms as a whole can one grasp the depth an dimmensity of their exploitation of every mood and emotion of which the human soul is capable and their reaction to every experience that mankind has known.

Here are souls in the very heights of exultation and religious ecstacy, dwelling on the mountains, with the clear view of God, and the full inspiration of His presence. But here are souls, also, crying out of the depths of despair and finding light in the valley of darkness. Here is realism in the face of suffering and persecution and the designs and hatred of enemies. And above all, realism in the face of change and decay, and the grimness of death itself.

Here, too, is the voice of friendship and fellowship, the pilgrim songs of those who through life are journeying and worshipping together.

There is nothing left out in the whole range of human emotions, doubts, fears, inspirations and ecstasies—all of life's experiences from the cradle to the grave are there.

GLORY OF GOD

From the opening Psalm1, recounting the blessedness of the man "that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly—but his delight is in the law of the Lord," to the closing 150th Psalm with its typical song of praise the Psalms move in the rich areas of nature and human nature.

Here, in addition to the exploration of the heart of man, and the visions of the glory of God, are the observations and reflections of inspired poets near to every phase of nature, with eyes lifted to the hills, meditations in green pastures and beside still waters, the mystery of the sea, the anger of storms; and towering over man and nature the Holy City and the House of the Lord, to which devout souls ascend with gladness, to worship in the sanctuary of strength and beauty, with the word of God hidden in their hearts.

And each of us may have it as his, or her, book of devotions.

Thousands See Thrilling Parachute Jumps, Precision Flying, Big Planes At Air Show

When a man becomes 61 years old, he normally begins thinking about retiring with nothing more strenuous planned than perhaps a good day in the garden.

However, more than 10,000 Greater Victorians who visited Patricia airport Friday, saw the truth in the saying "you're as old as you feel," as they watched 61-year-old "Pop" Whittier perform his 82nd and 83rd parachute jumps.

"Pop" and Shorty Stark, who is in his 40's which would be considered by most people as old enough for a man engaged in such a hazardous occupation—jumped simultaneously from an aircraft in a "race" to the ground.

It was one of the highlights of the second annual air show sponsored jointly by the Victoria Flying Club and the Victoria Kinsmen Club. There were two perfomances, one in the afternoon and one in the evening.

Both men delayed pulling their ripcords for fully 1,000 feet in order to win the "race." "Pop" landed a few seconds ahead of his rival.

THRILLING JUMP

A few moments later, Bill Bushman of Pasadana, Calif., gave the thousands present their biggest thrill when his 'chute collapsed just after it had opened and he plummeted earthward.

It was all part of the show, it turned out, as the defective silk was released and Bushman opened a second parachute after falling another 500 feet.

"Swede" Ralston of Hillsboro, Ore., and his group of precision flyers were on hand with an amazing display of flying. "Swede" and his protege, Dick Martin, teamed up in formation aerobatics in the AT-6's or Harvards as they are called in Canada.

Later, "Swede" performed in a solo display of masterful low-level flying that kept the crowd gasping. He had them laughing, however, when he landed, jumped into a tiny Cub plane and gave an exhibition of "how not to fly" as he swooped, bumped a wheel on the ground and did stall turns and rolls well nigh impossible in the tiny aircraft.

Nellis E. Walker of Battle Ground, Wash., who is paralyzed from the waist down as a result of a logging accident, was lifted from his wheelchair and placed in his tiny Ercoupe, along with his two constant passengers, his dog, Rags, and his South American ringtail monkey, Chichi.

He then took off and did stall turns and rolls at the top of loops and showed some good all-round flying—which was remarkable when the fact is considered that the aircraft had fixed rudders with no rudder-pedals in the cockpit and all turns were by aileron alone.

NORTH STAR POPULAR

Early in the two-hour show, a large four-engined Trans-Canada Air Lines North Star landed and was opened to the public for inspection. A continual stream of citizens had a look at the spacious interior of the 40-passenger plane and crew members answered all questions.

The full-course meals, warmed up frozen food, were shown. This is the most recent T.C.A. service on the trans-continental flights.

Forty lucky ticket holders were taken on a half-hour flight over the city in the sleek, silver aircraft at the end of the show.

A huge Boeing Stratoliner roared down the runways of the airport early in the afternoon but did not land.

Attracting a good deal of attention was an R.C.A.F. air-sea rescue Lancaster parked near the control tower. On display in front of the four-engined aircraft were various types of rescue equipment for crews in distress on the sea or on high mountains.

Parents had many questions to answer during the air show as youngsters, like the one above looking at an R.C.A.F. air-sea rescue Lancaster, kept asking about anything and everything that had to do with aeroplanes and flying. Air-sea rescue equipment was on display in front of the Lancaster, which flew over the city around 10.30 Friday morning.

Tops in air travel in Canada in speed and comfort are Trans-Canada Air Lines' huge four-engined North Stars. The one shown above at Friday's air show at Pat Bay was opened for public inspection and hundreds of citizens had a look at the spacious interior, including the complicated looking pilot's compartment, as crew members answered questions and told of interesting points in the aircraft.

Age proves no barrier to 61-year-old "Pop" Whittier of Battle Ground, Wash., who made his 82nd and 83rd jumps during the air show. "Pop" says he took up the hazardous occupation 20 years ago "just for the thrills." He laid off for eight years, but now is a member of "Swede" Ralston's aerial circus. Between air shows he is a hospital orderly in the Washington city.

EARLIER CLOSING

Effective Monday, closing time at the Victoria Post Office for Flight 108 will be 1 instead of 1.10 in the afternoon, according to an announcement today from J. B. Sinclair, postmaster.

Says Car-Testing Station Would Cut Down Accident Toll

If a car-testing station was established in Victoria for compulsory checkups on cars, accidents due to mechanical defects would be materially lessened.

This was the opinion stated by Sgt. Brooke Douglass, head of the new traffic division of the city police, when he made a strong plea to the police commission Thursday that a station be erected here.

His comprehensive report covering all aspects of such an establishment is to be studied by members of the commission before the next meeting. He urged them to give the matter serious and careful thought.

Sgt. Douglass said tests had shown that one out of every three cars on the road is in need of adjustment to bring about safer driving. He said many motorists did not have known adjustments made and that a compulsory testing system was required to force this.

His recommendation was for a three-line station to handle the approximately 27,500 cars in Victoria and district twice yearly.

The sergeant's report said cost of equipment for a two-lane station, not installed, would be $6,717. Cost of a three-line station would be $9,198. Other costs to be considered, he said, was the building, concrete floor, lighting, heating, air ducts for escaping fumes and insurance.

A two-lane station would require 18 employees, a three-lane station 22 men, he said. He suggested fees of $1.50 for two checks in one year and 25 cents for rejections on each additional visit.

Texas Doctor Relaxes And Rests In Victoria

Dr. Nina Fay Calhoun, a visitor from Dallas, Texas, thinks professional people should get away for a short holiday every three or four months—but in her profession finds it is easier to talk about such a holiday than to take it.

"When your working day covers 10 to 12 hours and you treat in that time from 30 to 40 people," Dr. Calhoun explains, "the time eventually does come when you must get away for a complete rest."

A specialist in dermatology, Dr. Calhoun has been practicing for over 25 years, in partnership with her husband. When he died a little over a year ago, she carried on alone.

The Calhouns had spent a brief time in Victoria some years ago on a hurried western trip and Dr. "Nina Fay" always planned to come back for a more leisurely visit. The opportunity came this year when Altrusa International of which she is past president held an annual gathering at Banff.

"I decided to conclude the convention with that complete rest I had been talking about," she says, "and I immediately thought of Victoria. So, here I am!"

Not only does Dr. Calhoun have a home and offices in Dallas, she also owns a 280-acre "farm," as she calls it, where she raises white face cattle.

It's at the ranch home, too, within motor distance of Dallas, that she has a fine group of paintings, oils and water colors, collected in travels with her husband to many parts of the world.

"That was our hobby," she tells you, "and we had much enjoyment in our collection."

Her eyes twinkle behind their glasses as she adds: "Not a modern in the whole lot."

Dr. Calhoun is a graduate of the Texas School of Medicine at Galveston. She met her husband there and they were married while still attending college. She is affiliated with Alpha Epsilon Iota, women's medical fraternity, and is a past president of the Dallas Business and Professional Women's Club.

Mrs. Becky Inman, president of the Dallas Altrusa Club, who also attended the Banff convention, is with Dr. Calhoun in Victoria. They are staying at the Empress Hotel.

Four Maids In Attendance At Evans-Willock Nuptials

U.B.C. Photographer Claims Eva-Lind Hunter As Bride

Vancouver, where the groom is staff photographer at University of British Columbia, and where the newlyweds will make their future home, shares interest with Victoria in the fashionable early-evening wedding Thursday at St. John's Anglican Church.

Principals were Eva-Lind Hunter, popular staff member of the Dominion Laboratory of Forest Pathology, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. John Lind Hunter, Cambridge Street, and Benjamin William Hill-Tout, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Hill-Tout, Hampshire Road.

For the service conducted by Rev. George Biddle, and in which she was given in marriage by her father, the bride donned a picture gown of white silk faille taffeta, the voluminous folds of the skirt creating a full court train. Neckline was high and rounded and banded in heavy white lace to fashion a scalloped yoke. Seed pearls and beads ornamented the headdress, a lovely crown for the long filmy veil of embroidered net.

Wax-like gardenias and stephanotis formed the exquisite mounting for the white Bible she carried in her hands.

Similar gowns of turquoise silk faille taffeta adorned matron of honor, Mrs. R. L. Burkmar, sister of the bride, and Miss Gwyneth Waterman who came from Vancouver to be brides maid. They carried colonial bouquets to harmonize with their floral headdresses.

Douglas C. Hill-Tout, of Chilliwack, was best man for his brother. Ushering were Edward Hill-Tout, also brother of the groom, Stuart R. Thompson and Robert Golding. Frederick Chubb was organist.

"Craigmyle" on Craigdarroch Road was the scene of the reception. Lionel A. Hartshorne proposed the toast.

The bride changed to a flamingo pink three-piece suit, with soft grey hat and suede accessories for the wedding trip to Salt Spring Island.

In Vancouver, the couple will live at 5617 Agronomy Road, University Heights.

Re-Engined Mill Bay Ferry Now Gives Faster Service

Mv. Brentwood returned to service July 1 a faster and better ship than ever before in her 25-year career on Saanich Inlet.

And the wooden-hulled ferry also has two new berths at Moodyville and Mill Bay, the finest she has yet enjoyed on that service.

Taken out of service last Jan. 8 while the provincial government replaced the landing wharves at either end of the route, Mv. Brentwood has been re-engined and overhauled during the six-month interval.

The ferry had experienced difficulty keeping up with her half-hour schedule, which allowed only two minutes at either end for loading and unloading. Now driven by a 152-horsepower eight-cylinder Gardiner diesel, her speed has been increased from 7½ to 9½ knots and she will make the run in 21 instead of 26 minutes.

This will more than double the previous two-minute loading and unloading time.

On the day the service was resumed, Mv. Brentwood carried heavy loads, according to ferry company officials.

The service is provided by a private company under contract with the provincial government.

While Mv. Brentwood has been plying between Brentwood and Mill Bay for 25 years, her career dates back further than that. She was a steam-driven coastal freighter before converted into a car ferry.

TRIALS SUCCESSFUL—Soon to be in operation between Woodward's Landing and Ladner, near the mouth of the Fraser River, is the new 147-foot ferry Delta Princess, which Thursday successfully carried out her steaming trials. The ferry, built at Esquimalt by Yarrows Ltd., is powered by two twin-diesel Vivian engines which drive two propellers at each end. She can carry 30 automobiles and 200 passengers. The Delta Princess was built for the provincial Department of Public Works at a cost of nearly $260,000.

Two Freighters From Japan At Victoria

Two freighters from Yawata, Japan, now are at this port, Cecil Ridout of King Bros. shipping agents, said today.

At anchor in Royal Roads is the Panamanian vessel Dorado, whose master is Capt. A. P. Cambanis, while the Norwegian ship Sjoa arrived around 2 Friday morning and docked at Ogden Point. She is taking on about 1,000,000 feet of lumber here.

Another Greek ship, the Nestos, which has been riding at anchor in Royal Roads for nearly a month awaiting orders, may leave within the next few days, Mr. Ridout said.

Navy Promotions

Four Victoria men were listed in the half-yearly promotion list announced by naval headquarters Friday.

Promoted to the rank of commander is David W. Groos, D.S.C., commanding officer of the destroyer Cresent. Also made a commander was Robert P. Welland, D.S.C., staff officer (torpedo and anti-submarine) to director of weapons and tactics at naval headquarters.

Elevated to the rank of ordnance commander was Henry M. Walker, officer in charge of the ordnance training centre, Halifax.

Donald McLure, director-general, supply and fleet accounting, naval headquarters, was promoted to the rank of commander.

Want New Hill For Soap Box Derby

Knights of Pythias plan a bigger and better soap box derby on Labor Day this year and they have asked the city for an opportunity to discuss with aldermen possible sites where they could map out their course.

This year's derby will be the fifth sponsored by the group which feels that Ryan Street Hill, where the other races were held, is dangerous for spectators as well as contestants.

The group did not say where it wanted to hold the event this year—it asked only for a chance to discuss other locations.

Last year's derby attracted 89 entries and was watched by 4,000 spectators.

It is hoped this year for winners to take part in national championships and then travel to Akron, Ohio, for the U.S. finals.

Sgt. C. C. Jacklin Honored By Fellow Police Officers

Twenty-four fellow officers and other friends gathered in the British Public Schools Club Thursday night to toast Sgt. Chris C. Jacklin of B.C. Provincial Police, who is being transferred to Nanaimo Monday.

He was presented with a handsome desk writing set from friends of the force as a token of their esteem. Inspector Robert Owens, in comand of the lower island division of the B.C. police, made the presentation to the widely-known senior N.C.O. police officer.

"I have certainly enjoyed working here with you fellows," said Sgt. Jacklin, who has been on the force for 24 years. He was stationed in Nanaimo from 1928 to 1939, in Prince Rupert until 1941 and then came back to Victoria.

Others attending were Reeve A. I. Thomas, J.P., Constable Fred Ciunk, Constable William Stark, Detective John Lund, Cpl. Hugh Doubney, Mech.-Supt. J. McNaughton, Constable Douglas Callin, Charles Callin, Constable Bud Godfrey, Game Wardens Robert Sinclair and Joseph Jones, Game Inspector George Stevenson, Constable Cliff Dryden, chief radio operator W. Conlin, Chuck Kinloch, Campbell Forbes, Kim Campbell, Constable Peter Smith, Sgt. A. J. Pomeroy, Det. Cpl. "Sandy" Holm, S.-Sgt. Archie Carmichael and chief clerk G. Wyman.

Victoria Tug-Of-War Team Beats Vancouver

The Victoria city police tug-of-war team, coached by Sgt. Thomas Banister, won the pull honors at the annual police sports meet in Vancouver Friday.

"We beat the Vancouver police by two straight pulls—and that is the first time we've beaten them on their home soil," said the coach.

Early in the 11th century, King Olaf Skottonung united Sweden into a strong nation and established Christianity there.

Speaker Describes Winston Churchill's Characteristics

"Because we have the leadership of men like Winston Churchill who will die but not be conquered and because there is such a following after the pattern of such men, we are still free," Louis J. Alber, noted American lecturer stated in an address to members of the Rotary Club in the Empress Hotel Thursday.

Mr. Alber, who was Mr. Churchill's lecture manager during the early 1930's when the famous British statesman was giving a series of lecture tours throughout the United States, painted a brilliant word picture of the former British Prime Minister, describing some of his famous characteristics and his personality.

Mr. Churchill was likened to three famous Americans; Being as democratic as William Jennings Bryan, as kind as William Howard Taft and as keen in his humor as Will Rogers. He was America's staunchest and most understanding friend since General Lafayette—an "Anglo-American phenomenon in whom are united the finest virtues and high fighting qualities of his British father and American mother."

"Churchill is brutally forthright and his personality is 'colossal' in Hollywood terms," Mr. Alber continued. "He has a prodigious memory and his ability to concentrate is ferocious. He also knows how to meet a crisis."

Had Largest Majority

REGINA (CP) — Agriculture Minister Gardiner polled the biggest majority of any federal member elected in Saskatchewan, it was shown in final results from the Melville constituency. He had a majority of 3,240 over W. J. Arthurs, C.C.F. candidate, and T. W. Drever, Progressive Conservative. In 1945 Mr. Gardiner had only 28 more votes than the C.C.F. candidate.

Selection Board Sits July 18 To 22

OTTAWA — A four-member Selection Board will convene in Vancouver early this month to interview candidates for entry into the Canadian Services Colleges, Royal Military College, Kingston, and Royal Roads, Esquimalt, it has been announced by National Defence Headquarters.

The board is composed of officers representing the three armed services and a fourth from the Services Colleges.

The members of the western Canada board are as follows: Chairman, Group Captain F. S. Carpenter, A.F.C., R.C.A.F.; service members, Lt.-Cmdr. R. W. Murdoch, R.C.N., and Maj. J. M. Howlett, Canadian Army; college member, Instructor Lt.-Cmdr. J. M. Clark, R.C.N., Royal Roads.

On the completion of its sessions in Edmonton, the board will proceed to Vancouver, where it will reconvene for further sittings from July 18 to 22 at H.M.C.S. Discovery, the Vancouver naval division. A total of 20 candidates will be interviewed, 15 of whom have made application for the navy and five for the army.

Soviet Influence In Europe Waning, Says Archbishop

VANCOUVER (CP)—A belief that Soviet influence in Europe is waning rapidly was expressed Friday by Archbishop William M. Duke on his return from a two-month tour of five European countries and the first formal visit of North American bishops to the Vatican since 1934.

In an interview, he told reporters the Catholic underground is everywhere and "growing all the time" in Communist-ruled countries. Behind the iron curtain he said Pope Pius believes the Russian people love religion and are oppressed only by the Communist government.

He thought Europeans gave way to Communism on the belief "that it would give a better and fuller life." Archbishop Duke said the same Europeans now are realizing that man "cannot live by bread alone."

The Archbishop was sympathetic towards Spain's General Franco, whom he pictured as "a most misunderstood and maligned man." He said Spain is not a real dictatorship and paid tribute to Franco "for saving the Mediterranean during the war."

Not To Be Sued In Alberta Courts

CALGARY (CP)—The Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, a Crown company, cannot be sued in the Alberta Supreme Court, but only in the Exchequer Court of Canada, Mr. Justice Hugh John MacDonald has ruled in a written judgment.

He held that Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Yeats, Calgary, had no cause of action against the C. M. and H. C. in their claim for $11,700 damages, in respect of their unfinished home built under the National Housing Act provisions.

He Was Out At Third

Bill Nelson, hard-hitting outfielder of the Bremerton Bluejackets, starts futile slide into third base during morning game of yesterday's twin bill against Victoria Athletics. Third baseman Frank Matoh holds the ball in his right hand as he makes the tag for the putout. Bremerton won 8 to 2.

John Marshall Cools Off Athletics Twice

Bremerton may be in sixth place in the W.I.L. standings but the Bluejackets still have John Marshall. The big, good natured right hander had himself a real time at the local ball yard yesterday as he beat the Athletics 8 to 2 in the morning game and then came back in the nightcap as a relief hurler to save the decision for Keith Simon, 14 to 11.

In addition to his pitching performance Marshall put on quite a show for the benefit of the 4,400 fans. In the morning he got himself into a real talkfest with plate umpire Bill Husband while in the night affair he went through a real riding from the fans in a wild eighth inning but still came out on top as he poured cold water on a dangerous Victoria rally.

Marshall's morning win was his 15th of the season and the veteran is really shooting for that league record of 25 wins hung up last year by Victoria's Joe Blankenship. With the schedule having two months to run John looks to have a good chance to set up a new mark.

A's TAIL OFF

In dropping the two games the Athletics looked anything but good. After acting manager Vic Buccola had got the club into a three-game winning streak they tailed off. The A's picked up no less than 17 hits off Bremerton pitching at night, including home runs by Gil McDougald and Tobey Tobias and still couldn't win. The A's pitchers just couldn't hold up.

Tobias went out after three innings charged with eight runs. Vucurevitch worked for two and gave up one. Logue followed and was nicked for five tallies in the remaining four. Bremerton's winning margin were three runs directly charged to third sacker Frank Matoh in a five-run spree in the fourth: After kicking a double play, Matoh took the runner at third and then threw wild to first with no chance to get the batter. Two runs went across and another followed on a single by the following batter.

After McDougald's three-run homer in the eighth put the A's within four runs Marshall got the call. Victoria got one more run and had the bases jammed with two away. The crowd was wild but Buccola fouled out and that was the ball game.

Four unearned runs in the fourth inning as the result of two glaring errors by second baseman Gil McDougald, one by third sacker Frank Matoh along with a mental error by outfielder Frank Finnegan just about tell the story of the morning engagement. Fifth run of the inning came when Frank Logue who went in to relieve Rex Jones, victim of the boots, walked a runner home.

GOOD HURLING

Athletics were in front 2 to 1 when the balloon went up. Given the four-run cushion Marshall coasted to victory. The big right-hander was fortunate in the first two innings. Twice the Athletics had him hanging on the ropes and each time let him scrape through by scoring single runs. Marshall then settled down and for the remainder of the game was rough. He give up only four hits.

Bremerton made it safe in the ninth by picking up two runs off southpaw Al Drew who pinch hit for Logue in the last of the eighth and took over the mound chores in the ninth.

In not one of the nine innings did the Athletics manage to get the first batter up on the bases.

Bremerton picked up a total of 11 hits off the three Victoria hurlers with Taylor, Pocekay and Briganti doing most of the damage.

Jim Propst will take the mound for Victoria tonight. He will be opposed by Bob Pirack.

Three Of B.C.'s Golfing Best

This threesome attracted the most attention in yesterday's Willingdon Cup golf trials at Colwood and Uplands Clubs, with Bill Mawhinney of Vancouver, left, leading the field with a 36-hole score of 68-73—141. Vic Painter, centre, Victoria champion, had a 76-75—151, while Doug Bajus, Vancouver, right, scored a 77-72—149. The trials for four places on the B.C. team to play in the Canadian amateur championships later this month at St. John, New Brunswick, will be completed at Vancouver tomorrow with 36 holes at Capilano and Point Grey courses.

Brecheen Loses His Magic Under Lights

What happened to Harry Brecheen's after-dark magic? The wiry little St. Louis Cardinal southpaw was poison at night last season. Under the lights he had a 14-3 mark en route to his fine 20-7 season.

But after winning three night starts early this season, he lost his touch.

With a chance to tie Brooklyn Dodgers for the National League lead by whipping Cincinnati last night, the Red Birds flopped, 10 to 2. Brecheen started but faded for a pinch-hitter in the fourth. St. Louis trailed 3 to 0 and the lowly Red Birds had four hits off The Cat who walked five.

Brooklyn stubbed its toe on New York's Dave Koslo in an afternon setback, 4 to 1, that gave St. Louis a chance to close the gap. Don Newcombe was unable to hold an early 1 to 0 lead and finally was knocked out for the first time in a month while the Giants were en route to a three-run rally in the eighth.

WINS 10TH GAME

Vern Bickford gave Boston Braves control of third place as he hit the 10-win mark with a 12-inning decision over the Phillies, 2 to 1. The young righthander singled to start the 12th, rode to third on Eddie Stanky's single and scored on Al Dark's game-winning single.

Bob Muncrief, recently sold by Pittsburgh to Chicago for the waiver price, pitched the Cubs to a 6 to 5 edge over the Pirates in a relief role. Muncrief came on after Dutch Leonard was knocked out in the fourth.

Charley Keller, another one of Casey Stengel's crippies, took his turn at giving New York Yankees a lift. He hit a pinch triple with two men on to climax a four-run rally in the ninth inning. The Yanks came from way back to nip Washington 5 to 4 with Joe DiMaggio confining his activities to one single and a walk in four trips.

Annual City Tennis Championships Carded

Annual city lawn tennis championships will be decided at the Victoria Lawn Tennis Club commencing July 9 and continuing for one week.

There will be new champions crowned in the men's and women's singles as the present holders are no longer in the city. Bernard Milledge, last year's titlist, is now living in Kelowna while Pat Cowan, popular local netter and last year's champion, has transferred her affections to the Rideau Tennis Club in Ottawa. Pat left for eastern climes after winning the Victoria club championship the previous week.

Rated highly for the men's singles will be veteran Carl Brand, who proved he can still keep the young fellows in line when he fought his way through the field to capture the men's singles in the Victoria club championships. Brand will defend the city doubles title which he won with Jim McArthur last year.

Other local clubs have already indicated active participation in the tourney with the B.C. Electric, C.P.R. and Hillcrest clubs ready to send players to contest the titles.

Players generally are reminded that the only requirement for entry is residence in the greater Victoria area and all public court, private court and club players are invited to participate. Entries for the five open events, men's and women's singles and doubles and mixed doubles may be mailed to the Victoria Lawn Tennis Club, P.O. Box 981, or phoned to the secretary, Col. W. H. Dobbie, B 1923, between the hours of 2 and 6 in the afternoon. Hocking and Forbes Sporting Goods will accept entries in town. Entries close at 7 Thursday. Flight events will be played off for all those defeated in their first singles matches.

Second Retriever Trials At Goldstream On July 10

The Victoria Gun Dog Club will hold its second sanctioned retriever trial on July 10, startinig at 12 at the Goldstream grounds of the Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association.

A large crowd is expected to attend to watch the retrievers work over the land and water An increase in the number of entries is assured with additional up-island dogs entered over the first trial held last May. Post entries for the hunting dog stake and the open all age event will be accepted.

H. E. Botterell will enter his black Labrador Pineridge Black Decisis, Hunter Smith will enter Tam O'Rockliffe and Rose Plant will enter her dog Pineridge Dark Duke. All three of these dogs placed in the last trial. It is expected that Jimmy Washington will be back with Lorrenden's Rusty Glint who placed second in the last trial.

This is the second in a series of trials put on by the Victoria club to encourage local owners to develop their dogs.

The next trial will be the annual field trial for pointers, setters and flushing dogs, and will be held in the Hillcrest area behind Duncan on Sunday, Aug. 28.

The field chairman in charge of the retriever trial will be Bill Sanders. Judges will be Tom Brown, aided by Tom Dicks and Howard Taylor.

Entries are being looked after by D. R. Serl of 1437 Grant Street. Guns will be in charge of Clarence Thompson and Art Brown.

John Kelly Wins Diamond Sculls

HENLEY - ON - THAMES, Eng. (Reuter)—John B. Kelly Jr. of Philadelphia today won the Diamond Sculls at the Henley Regatta by defeating another Philadelphian, John Trinsey. Kelly, a University of Pennsylvania oarsman, easily outrowed Trinsey of the Notre Dame Club, in eight minutes 12 seconds.

Victoria's Jack Roach Crowned B.C. Trapshooting Champion

Jack Roach, one of the younger set of shooters of the Victoria Gun Club, was crowned British Columbia No. 1 trapshooting marksman for 1949 on Friday.

In the opening day of competition in the three-day clay pigeon title tournament at the Victoria club's Albert Head Road shooting grounds, Roach displayed his finest form at the trap posts to win the 100-bird A class B.C. singles trapshooting championship. He topped his performance by being named the all round B.C. trap champion of the tourney by posting the highest score in all the events on the program.

Tournament continued today with the Vancouver Island skeet championships featured. It will conclude with a visitors' day at the trap and skeet ranges tomorrow starting at 10 and a prize presentation in the clubhouse at 5 by Russell B. Horton, club president.

The meet has attracted some of the finest shooting talent in the Pacific Northwest, including strong representation from south of the border, among which were annual participants Mr. and Mrs. Bruze Stoddard of Yakima and Al Sund of Mount Vernon.

Roach did not find it an easy chore to bring the B.C. 100-bird championship and his over-all laurels to Victoria, the first time a local man has won the silverware in many years.

His toughest opposition in the century battle was Garnie Carter, New Westminster.

Roach and Carter finished on equal terms with 95x100 scores and went into an extra 25-bird shootoff to decide the new champion. The Victoria man went through this contest with only a single miss chalked against him. Carter muffed three birds to finish up in the runner-up A class spot.

Victoria's Henry "Peg" Pottinger furnished the hottest opposition for Roach in the battle for the best over-all score in the five contests of the day. Roach squeezed through with a single bird triumph to take the silverpiece.

NANAIMO SHOT WINS

In the B class section of the 100-bird title event, H. Ormand of Nanaimo and W. H. (Bill) Dalziel of Victoria finished neck-and-neck. In the 25-bird shootoff the Coal City marksman won 24 to 22.

In the C class J. W. Green of Courtenay finished on top, Bill Johnston of Victoria was runner-up.

High man of the day in this event was C. G. Jennings of Tacoma. He pulverized 96 of the 100 birds he was gunning for to win the non-resident trophy. Next to him was A. Swenson of Big Harbor, Wash., with a 95x100.

In the professional ranks, Murray Laidlaw, C.I.L., was top man with a 95x100 and W. R. Wood, Seattle, Winchester firm, was runner-up with an 89.

In the 50-bird handicap, Courtenay's Green was the victor.

Henry Pottinger emerged number one in the 25 doubles event

In B class of this competition, R. Curran of Courtenay was the victor.

In the non-resident department, visitor Stoddard of Yakima was the winner.

The Victoria team of Roger Monteith, Pottinger, Dalziel, Horth and Roach won the B.C. resident team contest with a 118x125. Second team was the Nanaimo entry of Ormond, S. Torkko, Johnson, Frank Denton and Jim Wrean with a 117.

Canadian team triumphed in the international team shoot with a 109x125 score. U.S. team aggregated 106.

In B class of the all-round championship event, Courtenay's Curran was the winner with 165.

Clark, Carroll In Gorge Vale Final

Jack Clark and Dick Carroll will meet in the 36-hole finals of the Gorge Vale Golf Club championships Sunday.

The morning round will start at 9 and the afternoon 18 at 1.

Clark advanced to the finals by defeating Joe Briggs 2 and 1, while Carroll, last year's finalist, eliminated Ken Hicks 2 and 1.

In conjunction with the final the club will hold a "field day" at the course. Events will include putting, approaching and long driving.

Maj. L. C. Willoughby, Seaforth Highlanders of Canada, carried off the all-comers aggregate with a total of 500. His total was better than that posted by J. Gibault, who took runner-up honors with the same score. Lieut. F. C. Sulivan, Westminster Regiment, was third with 496.

George Knight topped the tyro aggreate with 355.

Honors in the Victoria Corporation Match went to L.Cpl. V. G. Valleau, Fifth Regiment, with a 50. J. Gibault, also of the Fifth, also posted a score of 50 but took runner-up honors.

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP)—Proximity, the world's biggest money winning trotter, Friday night set a world record of 2:11 for 1 1-16 miles on a half-mile track over the Buffalo raceway track.

The eight-year-old brown mare broke the previous mark of 2:11 4-5 set in 1947 by Sidney Hanover.

Scots Turn Back Royals To Enter Cup Soccer Final

VANCOUVER (CP) — Paced by John Halley's two-goal effort, St. Andrews advanced to the semifinal round of the Dominion soccer competition here Friday, tripping New Westminster Royals 4 to 1 before 1,000 fans.

In bowing, Royals put up a splendid fight but failed to come through with the necessary finish around the opposition's goalmouth.

St. Andrews fielded the strongest side of the season but were hard pressed to win. Jackie Jones and Wes Henderson, both out the past few weeks with injuries, were in the line-up as were all the other regulars.

The Scots started off as though they were out to make a route of things, right-winger Jimmy Greig scoring after two minutes of play. It wasn't until 15 minutes had elapsed that the Royal City boys started to click and for the remainder of the half kept the Scots on defence.

They tied it up at the 23-minute mark when Pat Cooney slapped home John Winning's short pass. Previous to that, Bill Thomas had missed two chances when in the clear.

It wasn't until 21 minutes into the second half that the winners were able to break the deadlock. Henderson crashed in Steele's cross after Don Matheson had pulled the Royals' defence out of position with a back-heel pass.

That counter seemed to take the starch out of the New Westminster boys and the Scots came on to put the game on ice on a pair of lovely efforts by Halley.

SWEDES WIN SOCCER

WINNIPEG (CP)—The touring Kamraterna soccer team from Sweden walloped a Winnipeg all-star aggregation here Friday night 10 to 1 before 3,000 fans at Osborne Stadium. Sweden took a 4 to 1 lead in the first half and scored six times without a reply in the final 45 minutes.

Cocker Spaniel Puppy Special Prize For Derby

The prize list for tomorrow's junior salmon derby at Saanich Inlet under the auspices of the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association, was sweetened today with the addition of a seven-week-old cocker spaniel puppy.

Charlie Evans of the Broad Street Garage donated the puppy and officials running the derby have decided that it will be a "hidden prize." This means that any salmon weighed at Hall's or the Anchorage boathouses has a chance to win and should encourage member-juniors who enter to weigh in all their fish no matter what the weight.

Association officials have announced that Archie McKinnon, well-known athletic figure of the Y.M.C.A., will attend at the Anchorage, Brentwod, to present the prizes at 4.30.

Prize list is featured by fishing tackle donated by the Frumento Fishing Tackle Works. Derby starts at 6 and closes at 4 and it is again pointed out that derbyists—between 10 and 17 years—who have no means to get out to the fishing grounds will be picked up in front of the City Hall at 5.15 in the morning.

The two immediately behind him were Ky Laffoon of St. Andrews, Ill., with 65, and Skip Alexander of Lexington, N.C., with 66.

Mawhinney Leader In B.C. Golf Trials

Canadian junior champion, Bill Mawhinney of Vancouver, is practically assured of a place on B.C.'s Willingdon Cup golf team following yesterday's 36-hole total of 141 in the first half of the trials at Colwood and Uplands Golf Clubs.

Mawhinney, who only last week won the Vancouver city crown, fired a two-under par 68 at Colwood in the morning and then came back in the afternoon at Uplands for a 73 as he paced a field of 19 of the province's best divoters.

In second place came Colwood's Bill McColl with a 70-75 for a 36-hole score of 145. Noel Daniels of Glen Oaks was two strokes back of McColl with 75-72—147, followed by Doug Bajus of Point Grey with 77-72—149.

City champion Vic Painter and Don Gowan of Uplands each had 151's, Painter shooting a 76-75 and Gowan a 75-76.

Mawhinney burned up the Colwood course on the back nine with a 32 after going out in 36, one over par. He had birdies on the 10th, 14th and 17th. At Uplands in the afternoon he was one over on the first nine and two over on the incoming holes.

BAJUS HOT

Doug Bajus, playing in the threesome along with Painter and Mawhinney, provided most of the excitement at Uplands with a four-under-par 31 on the incoming nine. Bajus, who was six over going out, fired a birdie on the 10th when his approach stopped two feet from the pin. He chipped in a 40-footer on the 11th for his second in succession.

After missing a 15-foot putt by inches for another birdie on the 14th, Bajus almost holed out his approach on the 15th and was down in an easy three. He followed this with a par three on the 16th a regulation four on the 17th when again he failed by inches to drop a long putt and would up his par shattering performance with an eight-foot putt for a birdie three on the 18th.

PUTTER TROUBLE

Painter was having trouble with his putter all day. He started out in fine style scoring par a 35 on the first nine at Colwood but skied to a 41 coming home.

His score at Uplands for the par 35-35—70 course was 38-37—75.

Bill McColl, who holds the best chance of a Victorian to make the four-man team, almost shot himself right out of contention on the first nine at Uplands after his par 70 at Colwood.

McColl had a near disastrous 43, eight over par, going out but fought back for a three-under-par 32 on the back nine to retain second place.

WIND PLAYS HAVOC

A strong wind at Colwood saw scores soar for the most part and with the back tees in use the course was a tricky test of golf. Only Mawhinney and McColl could master the difficult conditions while no one bettered par at Uplands.

The 72-hole trials conclude at Vancouver's Capilano and Point Grey courses Sunday, Joe Howat, secretary of the B.C. Golf Association, announced.

Other scores follow:

George Bigelow, Oak Bay, 152; Ted Colgate, Colwood, 153; J. F. Ellis, Marine Drive, 154; Hughie Morrison, Marine Drive, 154; Lyle Hurschman, Glen Oaks, 154; Gordon K. Verley, Uplands, 154; Hans Swinton, Capilano, 157; Roy Stone, Trail, 157; J. R. Cunningham, Langara, 161; H. Donaldson, Trail, 162; F. Scroggs, Uplands, 162; J. Reynolds, Glen Oaks, 163.

His Brother Captures Handicap At Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fifteen thousand racing fans jammed Exhibition Park Friday and saw His Brother, a five-year-old chestnut gelding, take a nose victory over Barton in the $1,500 Dominion Day Handicap.

Jockey Johnny Hruschak moved His Brother to the outside of the early pacemakers at the quarter pole, took a short lead turning for home and beat off the fast-closing Barton. His Brother paid $6.20 on the nose.

The first accident of the season occurred in the fourth when jockey Ken Wilson was thrown from Fountain Girl as he moved along the rail at the wire. The apprentice escaped uninjured and was revived in the jockey's room.

Local Cricketers Suffer 30-Run Loss Against Mainland

VANCOUVER (CP) — Victoria cricketers were beaten by 130 runs to 100 in the first game of the annual home-and-home intercity series against Vancouver at Upper Brockton Grounds Friday before a good-size crowd of spectators.

Thanks to Pete Hobson, who hit up 56 runs, Vancouver compiled a larger total than appeared likely against some steady bowling by J. Richards, J. Payne and R. Wenman. Hobson, however, should have been run out before he had made 10 runs, but Victoria's wicket-keeper, S. J. Vyvyan, dropped a perfect throw with Hobson four yards from the crease, and the batsman scrambled home safely. Richards came out with the splendid bowling analysis of five wickets for only 28 runs.

Wenman and Twite gave Victoria a fine start and hit up 51 runs before Twite was brilliantly stumped by Adams for 30. Wenman followed shortly after for 26, but Sparks hit up 19 rapidly, and only four wickets were down with 83 runs on the board.

The last six batsmen collapsed, however, before the slow spin bowling of Pete Darling, who took five wickets for 15 runs. Jack Adams gave him fine support by brilliantly stumping three men, and he also finely caught Morgan behind the stumps for the last man out.

Schroeder Whips Drobny In Great Wimbledon Final

LONDON (AP) — Ted Schroeder Friday won the Wimbledon tennis championship in putting together two great passing shots that stopped Jaroslav Drobny of Czhechoslovakia in a five-set final.

This dobule-barreled manoeuvre in the seventh game of the fifth set enabled the top-seeded favorite from Las Crescenta, Calif., to complete his conquest of the men's singles title, 3-6, 6-0, 6-3, 4-6, 6-4.

It cracked Drobny's service and broke up a match that had stood dead level at two sets and three games each with the points at 30-all.

Schroeder then held his own delivery in the eighth game, dropped the ninth, and ran out the match by serving a love game before a packed house of 17,000, including four members of the royal family.

The 27-year-old Californian started the tournament June 20 as a 7-to-4 favorite.

Queen Mary, Princess Margaret, the Duke of Edinburgh and the Duchess of Kent saw the match, played in steaming heat. The Duchess came down on the court from the royal box the present the victor's trophy to Schroeder.

Hutchinson, Mitchell On B.C. Track Squad

Bob Hutchinson and Harry Mitchell of the Y.M.C.A. track and field team will represent the local cinder club at the British Empire Games trials at Toronto July 15 and 16, it was announced following yesterday's Vancouver police sports on the mainland.

Hutchinson equalled the Canadian junior record of 22.3 seconds for the 220-yard sprint at Vancouver yesterday and won a photo-finish third in the 9.7 seconds 100-yard dash won by Dan Henthorne of Oregon.

Mitchell, who was disqualified in the 100 yards due to false starts, was awarded a place on the 13-man B.C. team on the basis of past performances this year. He was the anchorman of the winning Y relay team of Hutchinson, Duke and Pynn.

Mitchell has defeated all B.C. sprinters in meets this season. He and Hutchinson were the only two sprinters selected on the team of six men and seven women.

In the police meet, Rafael Duke finished third in the open 220 and Pat Fleming took third in the high jump making the qualifying jump of five feet. However, she was not selected as two jumpers did 5 feet 1 inch.

Phil Matson placed fifth in a 4.25 miles won by Bill Parnell, Olympic miler.

B.C. team to take part in the British Empire trials follows:

Men—Parnell, Hutchins, Bowers, Pavilich, Hutchinson, Mitchell.

Women—Patterson, Moore, McKenzie, Bemester, Jones, Gordon and Cave.

Young Lorne Main Provides Rochon With Great Test

MONTREAL (CP)—Henri Rochon, who yesterday was forced to dig down deep in his tennis bag of tricks to whip Vancouver's Lorne Main, today enters the final of the Quebec Lawn Tennis Association singles championship a heavy favorite over fellow-Montrealer Jim Macken.

Macken made it and all-Montreal final by brushing aside Walter Stohlberg of Vancouver in a surprising straight-set victory. The west coast's second contender for a berth on Canada's Davis Cup team was routed 6-4, 6-1, 6-4.

Meanwhile Rochon had his hands full handling the ambidexterous Main in four sets, 11-9, 2-6, 7-5, 6-4.

Twice the marathon match, played in a blistering 90-degree temperature, had to be halted while trainers worked the cramps out of Main's legs. Each time, the west coast youngster came back strongly, but finally had to submit to Rochon's experience and finesse.

Rochon and his Montreal partner, George Robinson, swept into the final of men's doubles with a straight set victory over Main and Stohlberg 6-4, 6-4, 6-2.

SYDNEY, N.S.—Tami Maurilello, 194, New York, knocked out Joe Dominic, 192, Garfield, N.J. 6.

Make Float Tests In Pollution Of Victoria Beaches

Float tests are being conducted off Clover Point to determine sources of pollution of Ross Bay and Foul Bay beaches.

The two areas were closed to swimmers recently when tests of the water revealed heavy pollution.

Blame was placed immediately on the city sewer outlet off Clover Point, but a study of the question has shown that other sewer outlets may be responsible, at least partly.

Health and public works officials of the city are continuing investigations with a view to making a recommendation to the City Council of action to be taken to rectify the condition.

It has been discovered that sewage has been running from an overflow in the east branch of a sewer through Ross Bay Cemetery into a storm drain leading to Ross Bay beach.

There may be other sources of trouble.

The float tests being carried out will determine this. Small blocks of wood, painted different colors, are being placed in the water at Clover Point, and the directions they travel in the currents of the water are being watched.

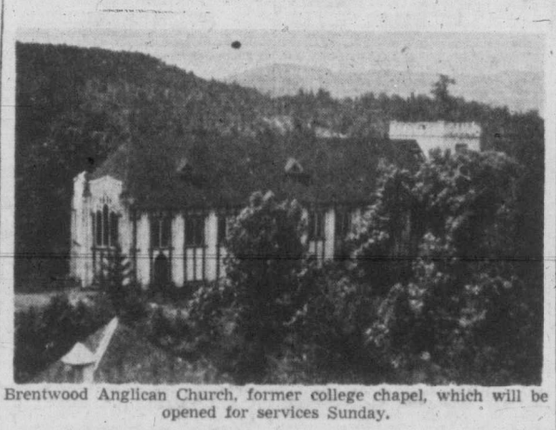
Transfer Brentwood Church To Anglican Diocese Here



Brentwood Anglican Church, former college chapel, which will be opened for services Sunday.

BRENTWOOD — Brentwood College Chapel will be opened for public services Sunday morning at 10.30.

The chapel, which was built by the boys of Brentwood College, was recently transferred to the diocese of British Columbia by the trustees and governors of the college. Bishop Harold E. Sexton has appointed Rev. Norman A. Lowe, one-time chaplain of Brentwood College as priest-in-charge.

The late Walter C. Nichol, one-time Lieutenant-Governor of the province, laid the foundation stone of the chapel on Oct. 25, 1925. Officiating at the foundation service were Dean Quainton, Rev. W. Carroll, Rev. H. T. Archbold, Rev. J. S. A. Bastin.

Though of recent construction, the chapel has its share of memories because so many boys, parents and friends of the college have donated furnishings, which still remain. Among recent gifts was a font donated by Tom and Tim Elliott of Walla Walla, Wash., and a carved altar frontal by David Cottingham of Palmer, Alaska.

Another Top Painter Discovered In Victoria

By AUDREY St.D. JOHNSON

The discovery of another Victoria resident artist whose work is as exciting as anything yet seen at the Arts Centre on Broughton Street, makes one realize what an important part the little gallery is playing in the city.

Katherine McEwen's exhibition, consisting of oils, water colors and red and black chalk drawings, reveals an artist of extraordinary calibre. The boldness and dash of her large canvasses and water-color studies is countered by the flowing, sensitive line of feline portraits in red chalk and three striking, rhythmically perfect black and white abstractions.

These last, serenely uncomplex as to form, demonstrate as well as anything in the show, Miss McEwen's decorative imagination. A versatile painter, she turns from animal studies that are commanding in their anatomical and character detail, to landscapes handled fluently under varied technical approaches.

She appears to have infinite resources of color and to use them in such a way as to leave one gasping over their depth, richness and brilliance. Yet there is no harshness, no suggestion of a posterish technique; only glowing warmth in the Arizona studies contrasted with the icy-cold purples, blues and greens of the Yukon and northern B.C. subjects.

"Shower in the Valley" is all shadow and light—part of the picture brilliant with sun, part soft with a blur of rain. Throughout the exhibition, this facility in the representation of light qualities compels fascinated attention.

Screen Star May Buy Hideaway Near Here

Soft-spoken Donald Crisp of the movies is back in B.C. again and he may buy a summer settling spot near Victoria.

He is up-island now, enjoying his favorite pastime — fishing — at Oyster River near Campbell River.

But he probably will head for Victoria in a few weeks.

London-born Mr. Crisp has his sights set on Knapp Island off Saanich peninsula as a possible summer Shangri-la.

He is not retiring from pictures—not on a bet. But he likes British Columbia and wants a summer home here where he can "get away from it all."

In Vancouver Thursday before heading for Oyster River, the likeable character actor who has worked before cameras since 1907, got his Knapp Island plans from Victor Fleming, the Hollywood director who made such films as "Gone With the Wind," and "Joan of Arc."

Fleming owned a home on Knapp Island and was planning on retiring there after finishing the "Joan of Arc" film. But he dropped dead last year.

Mr. Crisp thinks he deserves a good rest, and a good rest to him is some serious fishing and thumb-twiddling.

But he is not going to be fooled on any property purchases he might make. Once he planned on buying a home in West Vancouver but the deal went sour, when, after he decided to take it, price of the house jumped $20,000 overnight.

Shorter Work Week Being Sought By City Police Union

The Victoria city police Federal Union Thursday afternoon renewed its request for the institution of a five-day 40-hour work week for members of the forces, when representatives appeared before the city police commission. They asked for the shorter work week to be put into effect on a trial basis.

Sgt. Walter Andrews, union president, told the board that the men felt they were not asking for something they were not entitled to as more than 500 city employees already were on the shorter work week schedule.

While Chief of Police J. A. McLellan claimed the 40-hour week could not be operated without reducing the efficiency of the force, union representatives pointed out it would only entail to more days off a month for each man.

In a supplementary report by a conciliation board recently, it was recommended that the commission institute a shorter work week if it would not mean an increase in the strength of the force.

At the request of Mayor Percy E. George, the union will present a written list of proposals for a 40-hour schedule. Mayor George said he would be willing to call a special meeting to deal with it.

B.C.E.R. Concert At Park Tomorrow

First of a series of B.C. Electric band concerts will be held at the Cameron Memorial Bowl Sunday evening, commencing at 8.30. James M. Miller will conduct the 30-piece band. Guest artists will be Miss Grace Adams and Arthur Stringer.

Other items on the program include a cornet solo, "Ida Polka," by George Green, "Song of Love," the overture "Oberon," a souvenir of Vienna entitled "Intermezzo," The Bells of St. Mary's and "A Military Tattoo." Program will close with the hymn "Abide With Me."

Pat Sinnott, Deputy Magistrate, Resigns

City Police Commission Thursday accepted the resignation of Patrick J. Sinnott, Victoria lawyer, as deputy police magistrate in this area. Appointment was made last year. The board did not discuss a new appointment.

Monthly meeting of the Victoria and District Chrysanthemum Society will be held in the City Hall Thursday evening at 8. Len Holyoak and J. Craig will continue their talks on indoor and outdoor "mums."

Fine Weather Brings Heavy July 1 Travel

Victorians, enjoying an unpredicted fine day for Dominion Day Friday, took advantage of the great outdoors.

Thousands went to Patricia Bay airport to witness the air show there, while other thousands swarmed to the beaches and lakes in this neighborhood. It also is reported that thousands of Victorians attended the festivities at Duncan.

Travel by air, bus, car and steamship in and out of this city was heavy, according to all reports.

Trans-Canada Air Lines inaugurated seven extra flights each way between Patricia Bay and Vancouver Thursday night to take care of the traffic. This brought the total number of flights to 19 in and out of the airport here, and according to officials the 28-passenger planes were loaded.

Air traffic dropped off Friday afternoon but is expected to pick up for a climax Sunday evening when the holidaymakers return to their homes. T.C.A. has an extra seven flights scheduled for Sunday night and all are booked up.

With Monday the "Glorious Fourth" in the U.S., one extra flight each way is scheduled for the Victoria-Seattle route to take care of incoming and outgoing U.S. tourists.

Vancouver Island Coach Lines doubled its up-island service Friday to handle the crowds. Seven buses were added to its regular six-bus service, and, according to officials, all buses were loaded.

The E. and E. Railway also handled heavy loads Friday, with a special train chartered by Eaton's Remnants to carry Victorians to the Duncan festivities. The passenger list on the regular train also was reported long.

Some C.P.R. offices are closed and statistics on the steamer loads were not available, but officials said the Vancouver and Seattle steamers were believed to have had heavy passenger and car loads.

The Mill Bay ferry, in operation for the first time since Jan. 8, also carried heavy loads throughout the day.

A good gallery was reported at the B.C. Willingdon golf trials at the Colwood and Uplands courses. Almost 5,000 Victorians witnessed the two baseball games held during the holiday.

Victoria Aged Pensioners Association No. 3 will meet July 7 in the K. of P. Hall, Cormorant Street at 2.

The monthly meeting of the Superannuated Federal Civil Servants of Canada will be held Wednesday afternoon in Britannia Legion auditorium, 1616 Blanshard Street.

Patients of the Veterans' Hospital were visited by Hank Snow and his orchestra Friday evening when two concerts were put on in the wards. The artists were Hank Snow, the singing ranger; Mrs. Hank Snow, Jimmie Snow, Daniel Bissonette, William King, Patrick Gerow, Albert Saharchuk, Andrew Fraser, Jack Horner and Larry Juttrabo. Arrangements for the concerts were made by Fletcher Bros. Ltd.

IN MEMORIAM

RUSH—In loving memory of my dear wife, Margaret Isabella, who passed away on June 29, 1948.
The unseen strings of memory's harp
Are softly touched today,
Thoughts of her come crowding fast,
And tears we cannot stay,
So I shed a tear that is silent
And breathe a sigh of regret,
You were mine, I remember,
Though all the world forget.
—Sadly missed by her loving husband, Fred.

MARTIN—In loving memory of our dear wife and mother, who passed away one year ago today, July 2, 1948.
The flowers we lay upon her grave,
May wither and decay,
But the love for her who lies beneath,
Will never fade away.
—Ever remembered by her loving husband and daughter, Emily.

Victoria's Starlight Theater

Victoria Times
Magazine
SATURDAY, JULY 2, 1949

Lovely Ann Andre will play the role of Nina, the little street singer who becomes a continental favorite, in "The Firefly." She is coming from New York to star in this colorful operetta.

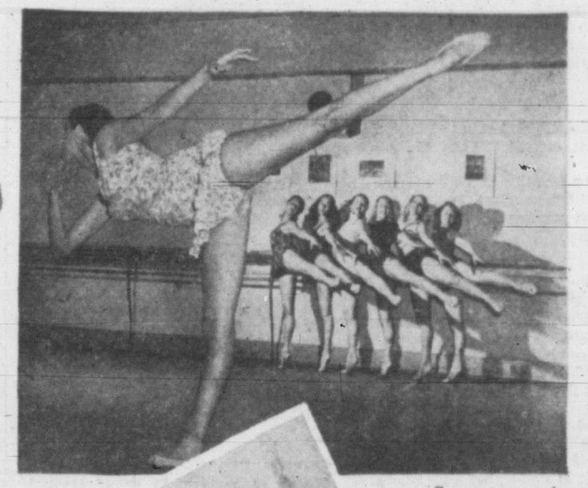
Michael Francis, popular Victoria comedian, will take the part of Nisch in "The Merry Widow," first production on this year's program. "The Firefly," "Roberta" and "Song of Norway" will follow.

Victor Duret, Victoria ballet dancer, chosen to appear with the ballet chorus for the season.

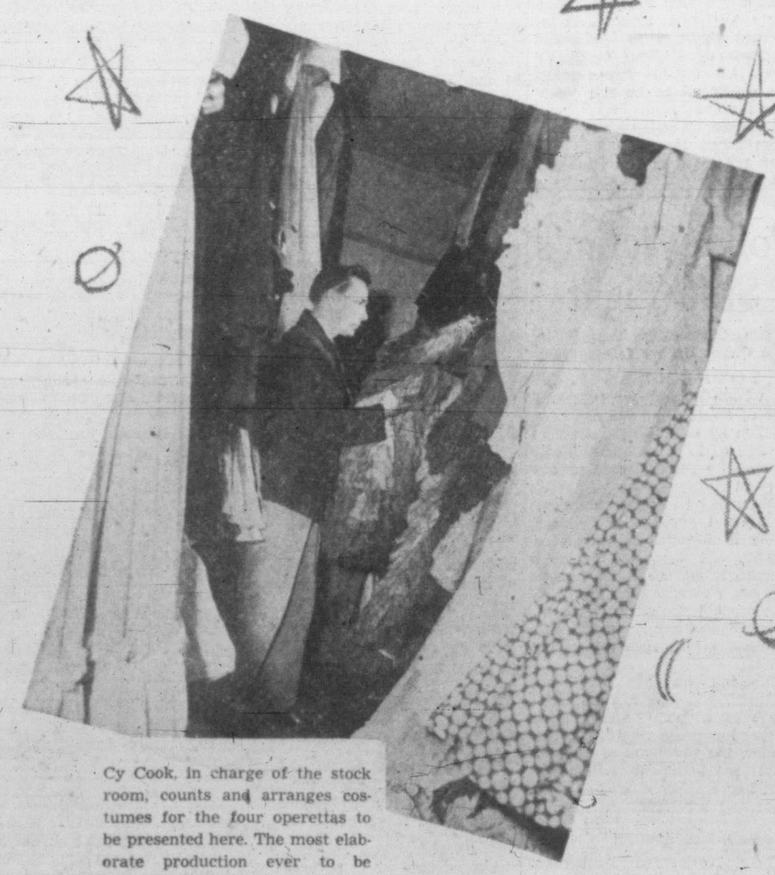
In Victoria Memorial Arena Commencing Monday, July 25

Victoria Theatre Foundation through the Victoria Starlight Theatre will, for the second season, give the Victoria public the operas they like to hear, at the same time providing an opportunity for young artists to start on their way to stardom. Resident director is veteran thespian Reginald N. Hincks, assisted by Michael Francis. Musical work is under resident director Harry Bigsby. Vancouver's Beverly Fyfe, a former Victorian, will be general conductor when the shows go on. Aida Broadbent, brilliant Hollywood choreographer, is again producing the dance routines.

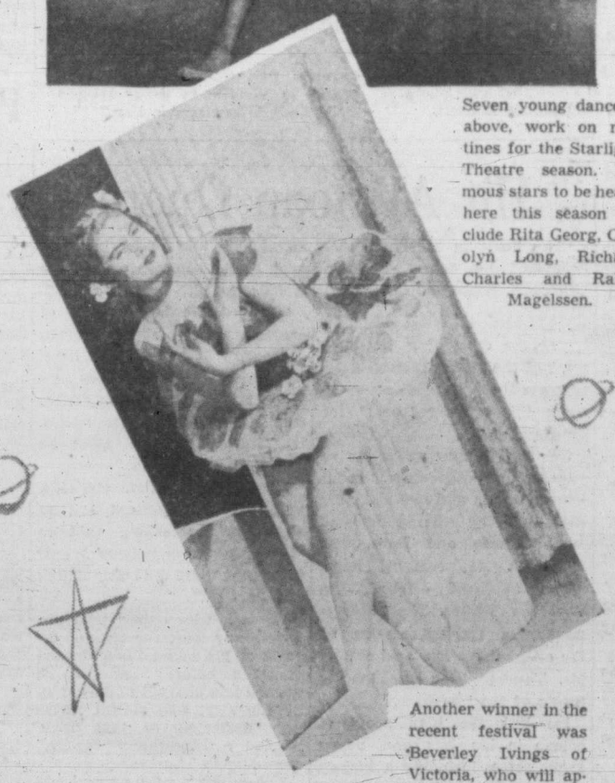
Rae Evenden and William McGrath, Victoria dancers who won awards in the recent festival in Vancouver, also in the chorus.



Seven young dancers, above, work on routines for the Starlight Theatre season. Famous stars to be heard here this season include Rita Georg, Carolyn Long, Richard Charles and Ralph Magelssen.



Cy Cook, in charge of the stock room, counts and arranges costumes for the four operettas to be presented here. The most elaborate production ever to be staged in British Columbia, "Song of Norway," will feature colorful peasant costumes in the Norway scenes and lovely opera gowns in the scenes in Italy.



Another winner in the recent festival was Beverley Ivings of Victoria, who will appear in this season's Starlight Theatre chorus.

Margaret Wilson, young Victoria actress, understudy for the season. She may appear in one of the productions here during the season. Miss Wilson returned from England about a year ago.

OF CABBAGES AND KINGS

A Diplomat Entertains

BY PETER ELIOT

ENGLISH IS NOT EASY for people whose languages are logical and mean exactly what they say," writes Sir Hughe Knatchbull-Hugessen in Diplomat In Peace and War, the charming reflections of this astute Englishman over the past 40 years.

He tells the story of the Frenchman who came to England for the first time, and on the train between Dover and London kept leaning out of the window, the better to see the landscape. An Englishman in the same compartment, aware of an approaching tunnel, shouted to him, "Look out!" The Frenchman took the advice literally.

But the Frenchman would be puzzled (if I may digress for a moment) if he heard the American lady, when telling the folks back home what interested her most on her visit to Paris, exclaim:

"But you should have heard those French pheasants singing the 'Mayonnaise.'"

Port Was Good

SIR HUGHE tells a story of his village church. It concerns a lady whose family had a vault in the chancel of the church, and who had a terror of being buried alive. It was her last wish, therefore, that a plate of sandwiches and a bottle of port should be placed within her reach in the vault, when she was laid to rest. The wish was carried out.

Five years later another member of the family died and the vault was again opened. After the funeral someone asked the clergyman:

"By the by, Mr. Holdhard, when you went down into the vault, did you see any trace of the sandwiches and the bottle of port which were put there when old Lady ——— was buried?"

"Well, of course," he replied, the sandwiches were just a heap of dust; but the wine was uncommonly good."

Took Hot Bottle

THE DINING-ROOM at our Legation at The Hague was apt to be cold in winter," he continues. Sir Ronald and Lady Sybil Graham were perfect hosts and their parties were universally enjoyed. I remember, however, one evening when there was some confusion. The company were leaving. An elderly lady was making something of a commotion in the hall. Sir Ronald asked me to see what was the matter, so I asked the lady if I could do anything for her.

"'Oh, Mr. Hugessen,' she exclaimed, 'when I came here tonight I brought with me such a stove.'

"This was indeed mystifying. I had seen no stoves except such as were the property of His Majesty's Office of Works.

"With such solemnity as I could command I said to one of the footmen, 'Would you please go and find Madame X's stove.'

"A prolonged search ensued, at the end of which a hot-water bottle was discovered under her place in the dining-room."

Exit The Parrot

MENDELSSOHN is one of the composers discussed in volume two of the Penguin series Lives of the Great Composers, edited by A. L. Backarach.

"Felix," he writes, "received two commands to Buckingham Palace, and he recounts with some naivete his reception by Queen Victoria and the Prince Consort, the account commencing:

"'Yesterday evening I was sent for by the Queen, who was almost (!) alone with Prince Albert.' He played the piano to the royal couple, heard the Prince Concort play the organ, and heard the Queen sing. The only blot on this golden page was provided by the royal parrot, which drowned the music with its screams, so that Felix had to carry it out of the room, cage and all."

Mendelssohn listened to his friend Madame Frege sing to him in the following words:

"Time marches on by night as well as day,
"And many march by night who fain would stay."

"Oh, that has a dready sound," the composer cried with a shudder, "but it explains how I feel."

He then rose, very pale, and paced the room nervously complaining that his hands were cold.

He died within a month.

Unworthy Praise

WILLIAM TELL never enjoyed the popular success deserved by the qualities of the music,says Mr. Backarach, who also discusses Rossini in this volume of "Lives."

In spite of the poor quality of the libretto and its excessive length it received the lavish praises of the musicians of the world; secured for the composer the Legion of Honor and a Serenade from the distinguished conductor Habeneck, and the Conservatoire Orchestra; and achieved 500 performances in Paris alone during the composer's lifetime.

Still, says Backarack, there is no doubt that Rossini, accustomed to the applause of the multitude, was disappointed at the result.

William Tell was often given in a mutilated form, sometimes indeed only one act. It was on such an occasion that the director, meeting Rossini and thinking to please him, remarked that the second act was being given on that very night. To which Rossini, who was as caustic as he was witty, merely replied, "What! the whole of it?"

Acid Epitaph

SEEN ON a tombstone at Esha Ness Cemetery, Shetland. "Here lies Donald Sutherland. His death is deeply regretted. He was a quiet man, and to all appearances a sincere Christian. He was killed through the stupidity of Lawrence Tulloch of Clothister, who sold him nitric acid instead of Epsom salts, and he died in the course of three hours after taking a dose of it."

Britain Plans Its New Palace Of Culture

Britain's "Palace of Culture," to be built on the south bank of the Thames, is expected to cost nearly £2,000,000 ($8,000,000).

The building is planned in two stages. The greater part, including a mammoth concert hall, is to be ready in time for the Festival of Britain in May, 1951.

In its report the general purposes committee of the London County Council says the palace will have:

A 3,450-seat main hall and a smaller hall for chamber music, amateur and school theatricals; a reception foyer for dinners and dances; public restaurants opening on a terrace and gardens; a two-story art gallery and two large rooms suitable for any purpose.

"The Londoner out for a stroll along the terrace will be able to enjoy a service of meals and refreshments in the open air," a committee spokesman said.

Buildings and terraces have been designed as a whole and, as the concert hall develops, surrounding ground levels will be built up and planted with trees, grass, lawns and flowers.

Dad Should Bath Baby

Fathers who leave household cares and family responsibilities to their wives "do their children a very real wrong," Dr. Herbert Gray, chairman of the National Marriage Guidance Council, said in an address at Scarborough, Yorkshire.

"Fathers should learn to bath the baby because, if they do, they will succumb to the irresistible charm of the little human being," he said.

"They will want to get all the wonderful joy out of its growth and the children will grow up having a father with whom they can feel safe. That is what fathers are for."

He said he felt too many English fathers took no part in home life, saying instead "I leave it to the missus."

THE BOOKSTAND BY AILEEN CAMPBELL

Cornelia Skinner's New Book Heads For Popularity Lead

THE FAMOUS CONDEMNATION of Hall Caine, by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, for what the latter called "pre-publication self-advertisement," will bring a smile to the lips of today's authors.

Sir Arthur considered any story or interview on a forthcoming book, unethical, ungentlemanly and generally blowing one's own horn. He felt it was a lowering of the standards of his profession and worried greatly about the effect such articles would have on the young writer.

"Such views of course are not in vogue today," wrote John Dickson Carr in his biography of Doyle.

TIMES HAVE CHANGED

"WE HAVE CHANGED ALL that. A young writer nowadays, if told it might advance his new book, would paint his nose blue and walk into the Ivy Restaurant with a placard of the book around his neck."

While Mr. Carr's slightly cynical view of the matter may be exaggerated, the trend in more recent years is definitely tied up with publicity of, about and for writers and their latest or forthcoming books.

Advance information as to the subject matter or theme of the latest effort by a well-known author, whether of fiction or non-fiction, is considered a matter of news, not self-advertisement, today.

LAUGH WITH SKINNER

HEADED FOR THE POPULARITY list at Victoria Public Library is the recent arrival "That's Me All Over by Cornelia Otis Skinner.

It is an anthology containing favorite items from her earlier collections Dithers and Jitters, Soap Behind the Ears and Excuse It, Please, all written in lighthearted fashion, according to the Library.

AN EXCITING LIFE

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY of Sir Thomas Russell Pasha, who served 44 years under 32 Egyptian governments, has been published by John Murray of London, under the title Egyptian Service 1902-1946.

From the early days when he formed the nucleus of the Sudanese Camel Corps to his long years as Commandant of the Cairo Police his life has been packed with exciting episodes.

The story of his fight against the drug traffic, for which Sir Thomas is famous, is fully told with first-hand information on the international issues which made the situation so complex. The book is illustrated with photographs, many of them taken by the author himself.

FOUNDING OF HALIFAX

THE ROUSING and historically accurate story of the founding of Halifax, Nova Scotia, in 1749, Roger Sudden, by Thomas H. Radall, is the July choice of The Reprint Society of Canada.

It is the tale of an impecunious gentleman turned highwayman who is compelled to flee England in search of a fortune. He finds it but not before exciting adventures in the new world. The choice of Roger Sudden is a timely one in this year of the Halifax Bicentenary.

Cornelia Otis Skinner, as she appeared in Victoria in Oscar Wilde's "Lady Windermere's Fan."

Hit At Soap Opera

"The Beast in Me and Other Animals," by James Thurber. (Harcourt, Brace and Company.)

SCATHING SATIRE, HUMOR at the drop of a hat and some of the silliest cartoon characters of the day combine to make this another "must" for Thurber fans.

Subtitled a new collection of pieces and drawings about human beings and less alarming characters by the author of Men, Women and Dogs, The Beast In Me, contains items which appeared originally in The New Yorker. The latter is usually a recommendation of the crisp, sharp and acid etched. Mr. Thurber lives up to the tenets of the magazine.

He hits the high spots of course in his bits and pieces about radio, including a history of soap operas and the people in general who inhabit that vale of tears, lost loves and amnesia. In fact, according to Thurber, amnesia is, as usual in soapland, as the common cold in the outside world.

"One of the basic tenets of soap opera is that the women characters who solve these problems must be flawless projections of the housewife's ideal woman," he maintains, adding that always "women must be strong and men weak."

He takes more than one sideswipe at the "present era of suspicion," remarking that in "1918 Americans naively feared the enemy more than they feared one another."

"It is a wise citizen who disproves any dark rumors and reports of his secret thoughts and activities before they can be twisted into charges of disloyalty by the alert and skilful minds now dedicated to that high-minded and patriotic practice," according to Thurber.

The author's new natural history of "the less alarming creatures" may not add greatly to history but is definitely good for laughs.

Tyrant Of The Woods

"Taltrees" by Jessie McEwen (Ryerson Press).

A PICTURE OF LIFE ruled by lumber interests and the transition to a new era is drawn by Jessie McEwen against a background of Northwestern Ontario's timber country.

Jessie McEwen, born and brought up in Bannockburn, Ont., knows the timber business first-hand. Both sides of her family were associated with the lumber trade in Ireland, Scotland and Bavaria and later established themselves in Ontario and Michigan. Her love for the woods and knowledge of the personalities which fill the bushland are integral parts of her writing.

Taltrees is a simply-told story of timber dynasties and the domineering force of the individualists which rule the kingdom. Co-operative interests and demand for better working agreements shape a new mode of life and threaten to break the influence of Michael Goldie, a benevolent tyrant whose stern rule continued to be felt years after his death.

Romance, rivalry and ambition blend to make this another portrayal of the Canadian scene.

Polio Victim's Stiff Fight

"The Trembling Years," by Elsie Oakes Barber (Macmillan.)

A YOUNG GIRL'S FIGHT within herself for independence of spirit after she has been stricken by infantile paralysis at the age of 17 is sympathetically handled by Mrs. Barber in her story of Kathy Storm.

Deprived of a healthy body and the normal pursuits of her age, Kathy is terrified and then resentful. At first she attempts to take it out on those around her, but slowly comes to realize that painful though it may be, acceptance of her lot, is the first requisite in the recovery of her spirit.

Drawing on her own experience, when as a young girl, she was a polio victim, Mrs. Barber has made very real to the reader, the problems of physical and psychological adjustment that her leading character must meet and solve.

SCARCE HEN-FRUIT

For Norwegian housewives there was scant comfort when eggs were removed from the ration list recently. Rationing will continue on a voluntary basis, and stores will deliver eggs only to steady customers—five eggs per person—at set intervals.

Music And Drama

Opera Comes To Town

By Audrey St.D. Johnson

THE OTHER DAY a friend of mine wondered why it was that of all theatrical presentation, light opera, since its dawn in the 13th century, should have gained more popular favor than any other. The question was an easy one to answer. Principally operettas are prime favorites in the theatre because they combine all the things most pleasurable to our eyes, ears and aesthetic senses.

Uncomplicated melody and energetic rhythms can be appreciated by the least trained ear and if they are well constructed, are a happy relaxation even for the musical pedagogue.

Besides, a good evening for most people, is an evening full of a variety of impressions and stimulations; so that when easy and happy listening is added to something to laugh at and something to sigh over, opulent color and the fascination of ballet movement, all backed by some delightful grown-up fairy story or romantic idyll, it must be a very strange human being who will not thrill in response.

Fills A Gap

MUCH TOO LITTLE of this pleasant fare comes our way in Victoria—and I shall not lose this opportunity once more to point out that we miss plenty of good things for lack of a COMMUNITY theatre! So with the road shows that are available avoiding us because of excessive costs, we must realize what a debt we owe to the Gyros and the Victoria Theatre Foundation, sponsors respectively of Gilbert and Sullivan and Starlight productions.

This summer, Starlight Theatre will cut a wide swathe through 20th century operetta to give us that first decade champion, "Merry Widow;" the deliciously melodic first quarter successes, "Firefly" and "Roberta" and the late headliner, "Song of Norway."

Excellent Choice

HAVING A CHANCE to savour, within a few weeks, these samplings of 50 years of light opera, will in itself be an interesting experience. For instance, to compare the effervescent style and dominant three-quarter rhythms, the obvious Viennese flavor, of "Merry Widow" with the truth and hauntingly Scandinavian characteristics of the Edward Grieg-based "Song of Norway." It seems to me that the choice, for a short season of this type of music, could hardly have been better or more balanced.

Also, the use of the best of local talent supplemented by good imported talent, has a value to the community so obvious that it does not require analysis. The experience for local instrumentalists, singers and dancers cannot be over-estimated.

Amazing Statement

MOST PEOPLE are a little cagey about accepting in full, the results of public opinion polls for, like beauty contests, they never touch whole masses of individuals whose comments or faces might easily upset the balance or change the final decision. There is nothing to stop any business man from making a hasty and localized survey of taste or opinion and publishing the results but the accuracy of such a picture—even in the small frame,—would be questionable.

The strangest and most contradictory summation I have seen anywhere was made public recently by an official of a southern U.S. motion picture exhibitor's association. What sections covering how many people, were involved in the poll is not recorded, (which is often the case). Just the bald, unsupported statement that movie audiences do not like excessive dialogue, crime, horror, brutality, costume pictures, emphasis on sex and—classical music.

Late Discovery

I HAVE NO intention of indulging in the current popular pastime of kicking Hollywood in the teeth but it does seem that Hollywood moguls have been barking up the wrong tree all this while; they have been paying fabulous sums to people who are supposed to be the world's greatest experts on popular opinion. All along these experts have been firmly indicating that the public is avid for sex and more sex, glamorous, opulent, super-lavish costume plays with colossal, multi-billion sets; chills and thrills of horror and suspense-packed dramas of crime and the underworld. And that opuses like "Music for Millions," "Song to Remember" and "Intermezzo," while not such good box office, were still in the money.

Now it seems that people are rejecting the eroticism—the artificial and unhealthful stimulation of sex and horror—and classical music! Instead, the demand is for—what? The homespun comedy of Andy Hardy, Frank Sinatra-type croonie-tunies or the mawkish sentimentality of Jane Powell and boy-meets-girl — hacknied plots? I don't believe it, although there will always be a certain following for such adolescent pictures in every part of the country.

Odd Bedfellows

THE ANOMALY, however, is that for so many years the majority of the public have spoken distastefully of the "stuffiness" of classical music and now, suddenly, we find it listened with the naughtiest and most titillating sensationalism!

One can only conclude that there are passages in the Rachmaninoff Second Concerto that aggravate the brute instinct, that Tschaikowsky's "Romeo and Juliet" is embrassingly sexy and Prokofieff's "Peter and the Wolf" degenerating in its depiction of crime and horror!

Else how did Classical Music get in there—unless it was supposed to be one of those lists the puzzle makers like to present. You know: "Which one of the above objects does not belong in the general category?"

EARNS GOOD MONEY—Smiling, happy-go-lucky Mary Humphreys of Victoria has proved that a handicapped person can be as efficient as a physically fit worker if given the right job.

Girl Cripple, Once Helpless, Now Leads Workshop Output

By HUMPHRY DAVY

ON A COLD GREY November morning in 1945 a young woman, supporting herself on a cane and leaning heavily on her mother's arm, made her way with great difficulty into the Victoria National Employment Office.

It was apparent to those curious searching eyes in the office that the young woman could not walk alone and was a cripple. At the inquiries desk, she gave her name as Mary Humphries and her age 22 years.

Mary told the clerk she was in search of a job. The clerk realizing the applicant would need individual attention in view of her disabilities, directed her to Miss Isabel Bescoby, then a special placement officer.

The meeting between Mary and Miss Bescoby on that morning was the beginning of an amazing story of how a young woman, a cripple for many years, became a useful self-supporting citizen. This would never have been possible without Mary's determination to succeed and the work of the National Employment Office.

Confined To Home

MARY AT THE TIME was confined to her home. She could not stand up or move about unaided because of a serious back injury. She spent her time listening to the radio, knitting and working her correspondence school lessons.

She told Miss Bescoby that she heard over the radio Harry Hudson, supervisor of Special Placements, U.I.C., Ottawa, tell how the government employment offices had made some home bound cripples into self-supporting citizens. She felt that she could prove also that she could support herself financially if given the opportunity. Her ambition was to leave home every morning and put in a full day's work.

The National Employment Office never turns down an applicant. Miss Bescoby set to work to do something for the young woman, but felt at the time that the possibility of Miss Humphrey's realizing her dreams was rather remote.

Mary's complete medical record was checked and her physical abilities listed in chronological order. These revealed that she was able to knit for one or two hours at a time. In view of all the circumstances, so-called "sheltered employment" at home appeared to be the only thing for Mary.

Market Secured

MISS BESCOBY arranged a market for Mary's knitted articles, which incidentally were skilfully executed. Her first cash payment was for two sweaters sold to a downtown store.

Mary continued to knit at home and found a ready market for her garments. Finally in April, 1946, a phone call came to the employment officer. The voice said: "This is Mary. I have crutches now."

The use of crutches meant that Mary Humphrey could "walk alone" and her case completely reviewed. The dream of normal employment was less obscure.

Once again the employment office set to work to find work for Mary. So the first opportunity to give her work outside her home was taken when Mrs. Uhtoff, an art teacher, asked for a model for her semi-weekly figure sketching class. As Mary could sit up for more than four hours at a time, the work was considered suitable for a start.

So Mary, a pretty blonde, became an artist's model. By this time, the employment officer was so impressed with Mary's sincerity, perseverance and eagerness that she and Mary were equally happy to learn, at the end of August, 1946, that Mary could sit up all day and move about on crutches with confidence.

More Progress

SOON MARY'S surgeon expressed the opinion that full-time suitable employment would not impair his patient's health. Miss Bescoby knew at the time that it would be no easy task to convince an employer that Mary could do a job as well as a physical healthy worker.

Fortunately, a fair-minded employer in Victoria, already sympathic to the work of the Special Placement Division of the employment office, offered a position to Mary early in September. The company was the Kennametal of Canada Ltd., a firm which produces a very hard steel used for drill tips, blades, etc.

The vacant position was that of operator of a machine file which cuts five-inch sheets of metal into half-inich cubes. The file is operated at a bench from either a sitting or standing position. There is a five-day week in this shop.

It took a week to arrange for Mary's employment. A specially built-up chair was provided for her by the employer, and transportation to and from work was provided for her by a neighbor. Mary's work steadily improved in quality and quantity to the extent that she was soon able to operate two cutting machines simultaneously. At the same time her health steadily began to improve.

EMPLOYMENT EXPERTS—C. A. Mudge, manager, and Harry Smith, supervisor of the Victoria National Employment Office, study a case history of a handicapped person.

Now Owns Car

DID IT PAY the employer to take on Mary? This is what he has to say about Mary's work, "Her output is higher than anyone in the plant."

To complete the story, Mary today owns a car, and is one of the happiest persons in the shop.

Mary's case is a splendid example of what the male and female Special Placement section of the National Employment office here is doing for handiped persons in Victoria. This little known department has made hundreds of contributions to the economic welfare of the community.

Applicants who are referred to these sections have a common problem. They are applicants who, by reason of physical incapacity, are not longer able to follow a previous occupation.

C. A. Mudge, manager of the employment office, says that experience during the past few years had proved that such workers when satisfactorily adjusted in carefully chosen occupations, were not only highly productive but were also more reliable in that they were less prone to absenteeism.

The special placement function consists of counselling activities designed to assist the applicant. Joe Nicholls is in charge of special placement for the men's division, while Miss Bescoby supervises the women's section.

Placement Science

EMPLOYMENT is now a science and these special placements officers in their work are continually in contact with welfare and other institutions as well, as medical and psychiatric specialists. Their chief task is to assist the applicant to discover his work potentialities and to determine a suitable occupation for him.

Employment officers complain that many persons misunderstand the word "handicap." For instance a handicapped person is not necessarily one who suffers from a physical defect. A bookkeeper, a typist or watchmakes, who loses a leg is not prevented from following his or her regular occupation. On the other hand, a telephone or power lineman and painter, who has lost a leg, and who is no longer able to climb with normal safety, is definitely handicapped for this type of work.

According to Harry Smith, supervisor of the employment office, one of the difficulties encountered when placing the handicapped in jobs arises from false philosophies prevalent with regard to employment possibilities for these persons.

"There is a tendency to classify all one-legged men as watchmen, all blind persons as broom makers, or rug weavers, and all tubercular applicants as fitted for "light, out-of-door labor," he said. "All are based on a faulty philosophy which so magnifies the handicap that it becomes the determining factor in classification.

Mr. Smith points out that today enlightened services for the handicapped attack the problem from the opposite angle, on the theory that "It is not what is gone, but what is left that counts."

Many Successes

THE PROCESS of selective placement involves an analysis of the physical demands and working conditions of the job coupled with an appraisal of the applicant. To accomplish this successfully a great deal of study is required.

The work of a special placement officer does not end when the handicapped person has been found a job. He must keep a watch on the person to ensure that the applicant is adjusted to the job.

The system devised and carried out by placement officers has been so successful that with the co-operation of the employers in Victoria, 492 handicapped persons have been placed in jobs during the past year.

Steve Dislikes New Look In Angling

By HARRY YOUNG

STEVE HAD BEEN marked absent from these parts for over 30 years. He had been living, and, in his spare time, fishing, many thousands of miles away in Scotland.

It was chiefly the fishing that brought him back. Charlie met him the other day strolling along Government Street with a pile of tourist literature under his arm.

"Just the man I wanted to see," said Steve. "Let's go fishing. I want to go back to some of the old spots . . ." and Steve's voice trailed away into a mist of memories.

There were steelheads caught on light trout tackle; salmon hooked by the tail that bored and bored into the depths for hours; mighty cut-throat trout that rushed from under a stone to snatch a bunch of worms.

As Steve prattled on, his eyes fell on a fry of trout tastefully laid out in a shop window. They ranged from four pounds downwards, and the notice said, "Caught on Lake Cowichan."

Steve's eyes lit up. "That's it. . . . Lake Cowichan. . . . Let's start there," he said, and Charlie nothing loth, concurred.

Ignored Advice

SOME HOURS LATER, the pair were casting over the troubled waters.

The casting was Steve's idea. He insisted on fly fishing despite the fact that Charlie warned him the big fish he had seen in the Victoria shop window had undoubtedly been taken on the troll. "Probably with the gang troll and wormed hook," he added.

Steve had merely snorted. "Nonsense," he said, "we are going to fish with the fly. I want to get into one of those big fellows with a light rod and tackle. I have been waiting for this for years."

Steve was now seated in the stern sheets, but the trout were just as dour as Steve had been.

He and Charlie had tried hard. They tied on big flies; little flies; gaudy flies, dark flies; flies with wings, flies without, but all that lay in the boat was one poor looking little fish.

"A suicide, undoubtedly," said Charlie with a sardonic grin.

Steve looked pained. "Wait until the evening rise starts," he answered. "Then we shall see some fun."

AS THE SUN disappeared over the hills sure enough there came the odd plopping of a fish breaking the surface of the rippled waters. Steve struck, and his light rod bent and twisted as a fat half-pounder fought gamely before being skilfully played out and swept into the net.

Charlie followed with a pounder, and then just as suddenly as it had begun, the rise was over.

But Steve and Charlie carried on in the fast encircling gloom. Their boat was drifting along a heavily wooded shore when there was a sharp crack.

Steve nearly jumped out of his seat. "What was that?" he whispered.

"Injuns, probably," answered Charlie, feeling chilly and miserable, but his joke fell flat when a second later two red deer popped their heads from out of the undergrowth to cast their wide innocent eyes on the strange interlopers on their scene.

Steve and Charlie drifted on. This time from the undergrowth came a howl that sent Steve shivering.

"No need to ask you about that," Steve said with finality. "I haven't heard that noise for years, but that come from a coyote."

He was no so sure about a bird that fluttered across the water with the whine of a jet fighter.

"Nature's getting rough," said Steve reeling in his line. "We, at least, have caught our breakfast. Let's make for camp."

Change Of Tactics

NEXT MORNING after the trout had been fried and consumed, Charlie and Steve decided to try again, but this time Charlie dictated the policy.

"We shall troll," he said, and Steve reluctantly, and with much muttering, fell into line.

From Charlie's box of tricks came an assortment of wires metal bits, spoons, plugs and hooks. In the bottom of the boat was a tin of wet earth and crawling worms.

Steve looked on with unfeigned disgust, and when Charlie handed him a lengthy piece of wire interspersed with small sheets of shiny metal, and tail-ended with a bait-hook he exploded.

"What the devil am I to do with that?" he exclaimed.

Charlie with much patience explained. "On the hook, you impale one of these worms. Then you put the 'flashers' into the water, let out a length of line and await results."

"Throw out the ironmongery shop," mimicked Steve, "and if we can't catch the fish let's paralyze them."

The baiting of the hook was another complaint. "Stinking worms" said Steve.

Hooked A Fish

EVENTUALLY the fishing began. The boat chugged its way slowly up the lake, and Steve let his wormed hardware out into the water. "What a weight," he said, "Much of this and my rod will be pulled out of its sockets.

He was still grousing when Charlie shouted. "You've hooked a fish."

Away out behind the stern there was a splash in the water. The engine was declutched, and Steve began to reel in. Slowly but surely the ironmongery came towards the boat.

"It may be a fish," said Steve, "but it is coming in with just about as much fight as a half-dead cod."

Charlie put down the net, and swept a pound trout into the boat. "Nice work," he said.

This procedure was repeated several times during the morning, but east time Steve became more sullen. The fish lying stiff on the floor boards raised no sense of pride in his manly chest.

Queer Character

IF THAT'S FISHING," concluded Steve, "Then its time I went back home."

"You're a queer character. You wanted fish, and now you've got them," replied Charlie.

"Yes, I wanted fish," went on Steve, "but I wanted sport as well. This fishing with the contents of a plumber's bag is a crude business. It doesn't give the fish a chance. He attaches himself to the hook, and then he has to fight against an abomination of metal that kills his strength, and leaves the angler only the remote satisfaction of pulling in the line. Why, you could land big fish without even a rod with that contraption."

"Of course you could," answered Charlie, "and lots of people do."

Steve merely sank dejectedly into the stern of the boat. "Sad days have overtaken my old countrymen," he moaned. "We used to fish like sportsmen in the old days with a light rod, light tackle, and we had to play the fish with the utmost skill. This is mere machinery at work. Why, they ought to have a reel that operates off the gas engine to complete the job.

Scared To Death

WHEN THE PAIR arrived home with their fry of fish, Steve gave his final verdict.

"It is my opinion," he said weightedly. "With all these metallic flashes moving over their heads the lake trout of Vancouver Island have been 'scunnered.' They come up to have a snap at the flashing metal and get a sore jaw for their trouble. For every fish that takes the wormed hook, there must be dozens who make a pass at the flashing metal. If I had my way I would bar some of the waters to any but the fly fishers, and then I think you would see a big difference."

Steve then proceeded to tear up his booklets on the glories of British Columbia fishing. "A lot of poppycock," he said. "But it was true once."

"So were your memories," retorted Charlie.

New Clothing Puts Sloppy Joe Out Of Fashion

THE FELLOW who moves around in his Sloppy Joe style of comfort is no longer in the height of male fashion. The heyday of his lazy untidiness is over according to the men's clothing experts.

TAILORED SHORTS are the new design for golf, walking or loafing. They are teamed with a lightweight wool shirt.

While comfort, freedom of action and utility are the keynote for the 1949 summer wardrobe, the tendency even for the most informal wear is to have the tailored touch in everything from sports shirts to shorts.

On the other hand outdoor wear is more colorful than ever.

Shorts will be a bigger part of the male summer wardrobe than ever before. For walking, golf, or just lazing around, the popular design is a pleated short trouser that ends above the knee—a little longer than the traditional tennis shorts, but shorter than the knee-length style copied from the British.

Tailored Look

The same tailored look carries over to the newest swimming trunks, too; except for a snug-fitting belt and a waterproof pocket for change, they look almost like walking shorts. Plenty of the briefer-styled trunks in knitted fabrics will be around, however.

While the T-shirt, either plain or with trimming or stripes, will be a big part of the summer scene for active sports and very informal wear, the new dressier sports shirts emphasize both color and versatility.

In lightweight wool, rayon and cotton, they're designed to be adaptable for just about every summer occasion except dress-up in town. They're found in subdued patterns, such as glen plaid or palm trees, for instance, or in solid pastel colors of gold, maize, rosewine, aqua and pearl grey, among others. But bolder patterns and colors haven't been eclipsed as yet.

Washability is being stressed in almost every item of men's sports wear, no matter what fabric is used.

WASHABLE rayon sports shirt has convertible collar and wide range of pastel colors.

For more formal wear this summer there is little noticeable change of style in men's wear, but dressing up for summer is getting a lighter job every year. Tropical worsteds are high ranking for summer business or dress-up wear.

Many other fabrics are available in wide variety for hot weather—gabardine, seersucker, cotton cords, and rayon suits, for example. Slacks, sports jackets, and even formal wear come in the same lightweight fabrics, and there's a big choice of either solid colors or patterns, with lighter shades predominating.

The dressed-up look" with a casual air that the men's style experts underlined for spring carries over for summer for men-about-town of any age.

Novelty fashions, such as the jacket without lapels, are just about out of the grown-up picture, but are holding their popularity with the high school set.

FOR BUSINESS—Designed for a man's summer comfort, these suits, from Wool Bureau, are in tropical worsted. Single-breasted model is a light grey in soft shadow-stripe pattern; the double-breasted suit is medium tan with narrow stripes.

HERE'S THE PITCH—New Magazine Feature For The Baseball Fan By The Stars Of The Game

Inside Baseball Is Not For Trailing Club

By Stan Musial, St. Louis Cardinals Most Valuable Player

WHEN YOU WATCH a ball game, remember that the player wants to win.

A margin of one run is as good as one of 20.

The game differs with the score.

It is played differently when the score is tied, or there is only a one-run difference in the score.

The way baseball is played today it is customary to play for one big inning up until the seventh inning.

After that, one run looks mighty big in a close game, so clubs play for it. In a tight game both teams can attempt to steal, sacrifice, hit-and-run, squeeze and all the inside plays.

But when there is a difference of two runs or more, inside baseball goes out the window for the club on the losing side.

The club ahead can play accordingly. In other words, the club ahead by two runs or more can afford to attempt to add on by these inside plays.

No Face Saving

THE CLUB behind cannot because the idea is to tie or win, not to add a run. The American way is not to lose 5-1, instead of 5-0. Americans do not have to save face.

This is the answer to a lot of fans who ask why a trailing club doesn't sacrifice, attempt the squeeze or something like that. The run is no good, so why waste an out or run the slightest risk scoring it. You have to have more than one run.

There are, of course, exceptions to the present method of playing for a big inning until the seventh. One is when a club is using its best pitcher. If he figures not to give up many runs, why not get him one at a time?

And a weak-hitting pitcher will always sacrifice a man along regardless of the score.

They'll tell you that in watching a football game to watch the linemen, and not to always follow the ball. But you follow the ball, anyway.

The same thing may be true in baseball, but try to anticipate the play and take you eye off the ball long enough to see how the defence switches with the hitters, etc.

Everything is done for a purpose.

NEXT WEEK: Hal Newhouser of the Detroit Tigers.

STAN MUSIAL—Hitting to all fields keeps the defence honest.

Engineer Takes 1,000 Hours To Model His Warship

By JIM McKEACHIE

FRANCIS M. JUPP holds the model he built of the cableship Restorer, on which he served for 27 years.

IT USED TO BE that the majority of men who went to sea and stayed afloat most of their lives would, at some time or other, get around to carving a model of their ship.

Nowadays it is seldom done—possibly because modern ships do not offer the challenge to a man's ingenuity and nimble fingers as did the old square-rigged sailing ships.

But Francis M. Jupp did get around to carving a model of his ship—though most of the 1,000-odd hours he has spent on it, meticulously seeing to every detail, were after he had retired.

Knows Pacific

MR. JUPP was on the cableship Restorer for 27 years—20 of them as second engineer and the last seven as chief.

During that time he made around 30 trips to the South Pacific—he cannot recall the exact number—and finally, in 1942, he retired at the age of 57.

The sea has always been his life—and it is fitting that he now lives in a home at Gordon Head with the property stretching to the shoreline.

Mr. Jupp, a native of Edinburgh, went to sea as a youth, serving on the Atlantic for five years before coming to this coast. When he arrived here in 1911 he served as fourth engineer on the C.P.R.'s Princess Alice, recently retired, when she was a new ship. After that, he was transferred to the Princess Adelaide, sister ship of the Alice, where he stayed for a year, then was moved to the old Princess Ena.

The model of the twin-screw cableship, a familiar sight to Victorians who pass by the outer wharf docks, is on a scale of one-sixteenth of an inch to a foot—smaller than most scales for models.

Practically all the fittings on the solid yellow pine hull were made by Mr. Jupp—tiny buoys, lifeboats, fittings and the like, all were carefully assembled by the engineer.

Details Complete

THE ROPES, halyards and ventilators are there complete—just as on the ship itself. The tiny whistle shines on the yellow funnel and even the frames for canvas coverings for tropical climates are just as on the original vessel. Signal flags fly from the mast spelling out WNDE—wireless call letters of the Restorer.

"I carved the hull while still on the Restorer, but most of the work has been done in my spare time since I came ashore," Mr. Jupp says.

Much of the work was done with a pocketknife.

Still Going Strong

SHE WAS first operated out of Singapore by the Eastern Extension Company, Singapore. In 1909 she was acquired by the Commercial Pacific Cable Company of New York, who moved her to Honolulu for awhile.

She then came to Victoria, where she has been based ever since except between 1916 and 1921 and 1941 and 1946, when she was moved to Seattle because of wartime conditions.

The old Pacific veteran may not have many more years of existence—though she does not yet show any outward signs pointing toward retirement—but when she does tie up after her last trip, she can rest peacefully with the knowledge that her likeness has been accurately recorded in the model constructed by her former chief engineer.

Secrets Of A Fingerprint Sleuth — By Sidney S. Birch

Bowler Hat Betrayed A Killer On The Run

IN THE DEEP SNOW of Christmas Eve 10 years ago, two little girls were laughing, proudly clutching their daddy's hand outside a toy shop in a London suburb.

After months on the dole, their father—for the sake of this tale I will call him Jim Smith—had been handed a £15 present—or so he said.

His hands were badly gashed when he got home to his worried wife at their suburban home early that afternoon. Hospital bandages covered the injuries. A motor-bike, he told his wondering family, had knocked him down.

But — and triumphantly he delved his bandaged fingers into a trousers pocket—the motorcyclist had given him £15 to soothe his injuries and say nothing to the police about the accident.

He had seemed at first shaken, pale. But in the normal atmosphere of his own kitchen, where a tiny fire spluttered, he began to regain his color.

It was a little later in the afternoon that Smith stirred himself from the fireside and took his merry little daughters to buy two dolls and a pram.

The girls could see no reason why it should not be a wonderful Christmas.

Old Man With 48 Gashes

NOR, just then, could I. There was some shouting, and laughter going on along the seventh-floor corridors of Scotland Yard's Fingerprint Department. We had managed to get our routine work done early. Somebody festooned mistletoe over the crime files.

Supt. Fred Cherrill, head of the department, said: "Get 'em all off home early, Syd. We'll forget the bad boys for one day in the year."

But as we struggled into our coats and scarves—the phone rang.

Five minutes later, grim, silent, disappointed—as our police car churned the white snow into grey slush—we had begun a Christmas Eve murder hunt that was doomed to end on the scaffold for a man with bandaged hands—a man who had plucked £15 from the pocket of a razor-gashed elderly jeweler in Surbiton, Surrey.

We drove past the Central London shops, blazing with lights. The buildings thinned into residential outskirts. Christmas trees twinkled in firelit front rooms. We halted with a squeich in Victoria Road, Surbiton.

A waiting policeman was stamping his chilled feet in the doorway of the shop of 64-year-old jeweler Ernest Percival Key—whose murderer had left him with 31 razor wounds in his head and 17 gashes on his hands.

"Let's get it over," grunted Cherrill in his most practical mood. I followed him through a narrow passage to the back of the shop.

Detectives were already at work in the tiny room. It held a work-bench, and under the harsh electric light the paraphernalia of a watch and clock repairer lay in havoc.

Clue Of The Bleeding Hands

Dozens of clocks ticked away . . . like insects in summer grass. Some of the clock faces were splashed with blood.

District Superintendent Jack Sands looked up as we crowded in with our bulky, portable fingerprint laboratory. Ruefully, he greeted us:

"Sorry, chaps, that it had to happen in my manor on this of all days!" A "manor" is the name used both by thieves and policemen to describe any police chief's particular district.

With a shrug we dismissed Christmas, 1938, as something that belonged to other people, and began to pick our way delicately among the debris in search of the first thin fingerwhorl of a possible clue.

SYDNEY S. BIRCH, the recently retired chief detective inspector of the Fingerprints Department of Scotland Yard, is the author of this series.

Superintendent Sands knew approximately when the murder was done. Mr. Key had phoned his wife from the shop at 10.30 a.m. to warn her against slipping on the snow-covered pavements when she went shopping.

It was the last time she heard his voice. Forty-five minutes later they found him savagely done to death.

It must have been only a few minutes after the killer left that the dead man's West-End actor son, Mr. Jack Keys (that was his stage-name version of Key), called at the shop with Christmas greetings for his father. The door was locked. So he got a duplicate key—and found his father dying amid the wreckage of a room.

Now, with the knowledge that police investigation painstakingly revealed, let us follow the murderer as he fled in panic from the shop with that fatal £15 in his pocket.

His fingers were bleeding from razor slashes. He had only gone a short way up the street when he remembered he had left his bowler hat in the shop . . .

He hadn't the nerve to go back. He pulled gloves over his damaged, trembling hands, and walked into an outfitters' shop in Eden Street, Kingston. He was in such a hurry that he picked a hat obviously too small, crammed it on his head with gloved hands from which blood was beginning to ooze, and hurried out. The assistant started after him.

Then, while a police ambulance was rushing the dying jeweler to Kingston County Hospital, a taxi was rushing in the same direction. In it was Jim Smith, the murderer, nursing those ripped hands of his—for several times elderly, plucky Mr. Key had turned the razor against him as they fought in that lonely little workroom.

Then came a fantastic scene . . . while Mr. Key died in one wing of the big hospital, his murderer sat nervously pulling at a cigarette in another wing as a junior house surgeon cleansed and bandaged his guilty hands.

The Taxidriver Who Stared

Smith told them he had hurt himself with a wood-saw.

"Why did you put your gloves on over those cuts?" asked the doctor—and for the second time that day Smith caught the scrutiny of wondering, slightly suspicious eyes.

But he had made his getaway from the hospital before the police hue-and-cry alerted every casualty ward to detain anyone reporting with gashed hands.

For Dr. Roche Lynch, of the Home Office, had scraped up certain blood-specks in the shop and found two different blood-groups. One was similar to Mr. Key's. The finding of the other group would only mean that the murderer, too, was hurt.

Smith, plunging into another taxi, drove to Richmond, bought himself a grey overcoat as further disguise. The blue overcoat he had been previously wearing he left in the cab. With newly bandaged hands, he fumbled in his pocket for coins. The driver scratched his chin and stared after him . . .

Back in the shop we were still working. All those dozens of fingerprints had to be studdied and traced. Every article of jewelry had to be inventoried to discover what the killer might have stolen. We worked into the night.

The Hunt Goes On The Beat

With screwdrivers, Fred Cherrill and I unfastened shelves and dismantled furniture, parts of a door and sections of shop equipment. These bulky items we fastened carefully into our sample-boxes, where no movement could blur the prints upon them.

We were still toiling when, at midnight, all the church bells of Surbiton began to peal for Christmas Day. Inside the little shop the clucks rustled, tinkled and chimed.

Christmas Day . . . we spent it in the Fingerprint Department laboratories, working on our pieces from the shop.

In his own laboratory, Dr. Lynch was studying the bowler hat the murderer had left. From it he reconstructed the color of hair, approximate age and racial type of the wanted man.

Police were interviewing the pawnbroker who had taken the stolen watch in pledge. The shop assistant who sold that too-small bowler hat was fetched from his Christmas dinner. Between mouthfuls of goose and apple sauce, the taxi driver described the fare who left the overcoat.

In Kingston Hospital convalescing patients in paper carnival hats stared at police cars in the drive.

The only man who was having a normal undisturbed Christmas Day seemed to be the murderer himself.

We built up a composite picture of him—height and size from the overcoat; shape of head, color of hair, etc., from the bowler-hat; the exact way the fingers had been bandaged from the memory of a hospital doctor.

Now the hunt swept from the Yard's laboratories and specialized departments to the constable on the beat. Now he had the job of spotting the murderer, whom all we technicians had measured, classified and described.

Little Girls Slept On

But this didn't mean that Cherrill, Dr. Lynch and myself were going home with our eyes shut. We, too, scanned the faces—and fingers—of fellow-passengers in bus and train; neighbors in our home suburbs. Every Londoner who could read the daily newspapers had the same chance now to find the murderer of Ernest Percival Key.

Yet five days passed and Smith still walked around, with a kind of fatalistic stupidity, in the grey overcoats, the pea-like bowler hat and with the bandaged hands.

His wife, his friends, his neighbors discussed the murder with him. They suspected nothing. But a police-constable who lived near by noticed that his tall neighbor, Mr. Jim Smith, had bandaged hands, a new grey overcoat, a rather silly little bowler hat. The constable simply said: "Good morning, Mr. Smith"—and stepped into a callbox.

That same evening, Chief Inspector Parker of the Flying Squad, took a couple of his men, each with a heavy-calibre police revolver unaccustomedly bulging his pocket, to the tiny house in the suburbs.

One officer knocked on the front door. Another crept around to the back, and waited.

A minute passed . . . then Smith, half-dressed, white faced, scuttled out. A detective stepped from the shadows, politely touched his arm . . .

Handcuffs were slipped over his wrists in the cold darkness behind the home he would never again see.

And upstairs, two little girls stirred, in the tranquil sleep of childhood, and clutched their Christmas dolls . . .

Pope Honors Negro

Ulysses Davis, building contractor of Nassau, Bahamas, has been appointed a Knight of the Order of St. Gregory the Great by Pope Pius.

It was believed Mr. Davis is one of the first Negroes in the western hemisphere to be honored by the Vatican. It was one of two awards made here recently—the first to Roman Catholic laymen in the Bahamas.

Mr. Davis, 45, was born in Antigau and came to the Bahamas from Jamaica in 1922. He has been president of the Holy Name Society in the Bahamas for 10 years and president of the Catholic Benevolent Association for 14 years. He is also president of the newly-formed St. Francis Xavier Credit Union.

Mr. and Mrs. Davies have 11 children. The two eldest daughters are attending the University of Toronto.

VACATION PLAYTIME

By TRACY ADRIAN

SPORTSWEAR separates in bright colors which may be combined to form an almost endless number of costumes for spring and summer.

The colors are red apple, jade, steel grey, yellow and cruiser blue trimmed with white ric-rac. The choice consists of halter bras, shorts, pirate pants, skirts, blouses, jackets, sundresses and hats—all made to co-ordinate in color and design.

Amongst them, a girl of junior size can make a great variety in her wardrobe with a few pieces to wear, a great vacation aid. Price tags, too, are on her side, being sweet and low.

TWO PIECES FOR this dress . . . blouse with Chinese neckline, button-down, pocketed skirt. White ric-rac trim. Matching bra and shorts.

TWO PIECES, TOO, FOR this India head cotton sun outfit with smooth lines. With the coat, an any-place dress; without it, a strapless summer.

AGAIN, TWO PIECES (but you could add blouse and loafer jacket and make it a quartette). Colors for all pieces are yellow, jade, blue, red and grey.

Pies From New England Inn Make Special Treat

By GAYNOR MADDOX

TODAY I am able to give you some of the wonderful New England recipes which made the "Publick House" at Starbridge (Mass.) famous. This establishment, a colonial inn, was built in 1771, and is run by Richard F. Treadway, a young ex-soldier and his wife.

They have succeeded in proving that old-time plain American dishes can be gala and unbelievably good to eat.

But first let's talk about the Treadway's lobster pie. The topping has crushed potato chips in it—and the lobster is kept happy and succulent with cream, egg yolks and butter.

Here is the recipe as given exclusively to readers of this column:

PUBLICK HOUSE LOBSTER PIE (two individual pies)

Two tablespoons butter, ¼ cup sherry (if desired), 1 cup well-packed lobster meat, 3 tablespoons butter, 1 tablespoon flour, ¾ cup thin cream, 2 egg yolks.

Melt 2 tablespoons butter. Add sherry, if desired. Boil 1 minute. Add lobster and let stand. Melt 3 tablespoons butter. Add flour. Stir until it bubbles one minute. Remove from heat. Slowly stir in cream and wine drained from lobster. Return to heat and cook, stirring all the time until the sauce is smooth and thick. Remove from heat. Beat egg yolks well. Stir into yolks 4 tablespoons of sauce, 1 tablespoon at a time. Add to sauce, mixing well.

Heat over hot water. Water should not be allowed to get hot enough to boil. If it does, sauce may curdle. Sauce should be stirred constantly while heating; takes about three minutes. Remove from heat. Add lobster. Turn into individual casseroles or small deep pie plate. Sprinkle with topping. Bake in slow oven (300 degrees F.) for 10 minutes.

LOBSTER PIE TOPPING

One-quarter cup cracker meal, 1 tablespoon finely crushed potato chips, ¼ teaspoon paprika, 1½ teaspoons Parmesan cheese, 2 tablespoons melted butter.

Mix first four ingredients. Add melted butter and blend well. Sprinkle on lobster pie.

* * *

Deep dish apple pie and corn sticks with corn baked in them are two more wonderful New England recipes of the Public House.

DEEP DISH APPLE PIE

Sliced apples (fresh or frozen), 1¼ cups granulated sugar, juice ½ lemon, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon nutmeg, pinch salt, 1 tablespoon butter.

Fill deep dish baking pan with apples, generously; quantity depends on size of pan. Add sugar and lemon juice. Sprinkle with cinnamon, nutmeg and salt and and dot with chips of butter. Cover with flaky pastry, making sure pastry is well over edge of pan. Brush with melted butter and prick with fork. Bake approximately one hour in moderate oven (350 degrees F.)

PUBLIC HOUSE CORN STICKS (Makes 14 sticks or 12 medium muffins)

One and one-third cups flour, ⅔ cup cornmeal, 2 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, 3 tablespoons sugar, 1 egg, ⅔ cup cream-style corn, 2 tablespoons melted shortening, 1 cup milk.

Mix and sift into mixing bowl, flour, cornmeal, baking powder, salt and sugar. Beat egg. Add cream-style corn, melted shortening and milk. Pour into dry ingredients. Stir just enough to dampen. (Don't beat.) Turn into well-greased corn stick pans or muffin pans. Bake in hot oven (400 degree F.) about 20 minutes.

BLUEBERRY PIE

One quart fresh or frozen blueberries, 1 cup sugar, juice ½ lemon, ½ teaspoon cinnamon, ¾ cup crushed cornflakes.

Line pie plate with flaky pastry. Fill with berries and sugar mixed. Sprinkle on lemon juice and cinnamon and add cornflakes on top of that. Cover with top crust, prick with fork and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for 35 to 40 minutes.

TOMORROW'S MENU

BREAKFAST Stewed plums, ready-to-eat cereal, scrambled eggs with chives, toasted English muffins, butter or margarine, marmalade, coffee, milk.

DINNER: Chilled melon with sherbet, Publick House lobster pie, parsley potatoes, corn on cob, hot biscuits, butter or margarine, mixed garden tomato salad, Fresh dressing, peppermint ice cream with chocolate sauce, coffee, milk.

SUPPER: Tomato-cheese rabbit on toast, cole slaw, compote of apricots and plums, maple walnut layer cake, tea, milk.

How To Cook Your Spring Chicken

CHICKEN is first choice for the special dinner. Chickens from 1½ to 2½ pounds are classed as broilers because they are so tender that they cook very quickly. Fryers are larger and range from 2½ to 3½ pounds. These young birds are on the market for a comparatively short time so should be enjoyed when possible.

The home economists of the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture, suggest buying ¾ to 1 pound per person if the chicken is undrawn and ½ to ¾ pound if it is drawn.

TO BROIL CHICKEN (Broilers)

Split broilers in half, lengthwise. Rubs with melted fat, sprinkle with salt and pepper and place, skin side down, on greased rack in broiling pan. Preheat broiling unit 5 to 10 minutes. Place broiling pan on rack 4 to 6 inches below heating unit, with heat turned to medium. Leave door slightly ajar.

Sear top side of birds, turn and, when lightly browned on both sides, reduce heat and continue broiling until done. Brush the chicken several times with pan drippings or melted fat and turn once or twice during cooking. Allow 30 to 45 minutes for total broiling.

PAN-FRY CHICKEN (Fryers)

Cut eat fryer into 4 portions for serving, wash and dry thoroughly. Roll in seasoned flour or dip in egg and crumbs. Use a heavy frying pan with ¼ inch or more of melted fat. Add chicken to hot (not smoking) fat and brown well on both sides, using moderate heat.

Cover pan to keep fat from splattering and finish frying chicken over low heat until tender. Allow 25 to 30 minutes, depending on size of fryers. If desired, fryers may be precooked by steaming or simmering in a tightly covered pan for 20 minutes, dried then dipped in egg and crumbs and pan-fried for 5 to 10 minutes.

TO DEEP-FAT FRY CHICKEN

Pre-cook fryers by steaming or simmering for 20 minutes. Dip in thin batter or in egg and crumbs. Heat fat in deep kettle to 350 degrees F. There should be sufficient fat to cover the chicken without overflowing the kettle. If possible, use a deep-fat thermometer to keep temperature even. Lower chicken carefully into the hot fat and do not over-crowd. Regulate heat to fry chicken at 300 degrees F., to 325 degrees F. temperature drops when chicken is added to fat. Fry until a golden brown and thoroughly cooked . . . about 5 to 10 minutes.

BATTER FOR FRIED CHICKEN

Mix 1 beaten egg, ¾ cup milk, 1½ teaspoons salt and ⅛ teaspoon pepper. Stir into 1 cup sifted all-purpose flour. Beat until smooth.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Now hot weather is here, it is more important than ever that what meat one buys for the family is properly cared for. Paper wrappings should be removed from around fresh meat immediately on being delivered at home. Place uncovered meat on a shallow plate or pan, cover lightly with waxed paper and put in the coldest part of the refrigerator. Frozen meats should be kept in the refrigerator until time to defrost them for cooking.

USE BOTH HANDS

Put both hands to work dusting. Slip on special dust mitts and work over furniture and knick-knacks with left and right hands. To remove dust from mitts simply clap hands together.

SAFETY FIRST

A thin layer of rubber cement spread over the bottom of ash-trays, fruit bowls, cigarette boxes and bric-a-brac will keep circles from forming on your fine mahogany and keep treasures from slipping to the floor.

Cuts The Corners On Baby's Diapers

In the matter of baby diapers a certain amount of change is inevitable.

But a Cleveland inventor has produced a fundamental change in baby's diapers which, in the end, should make more comfortable the swaddling days of every mother's son—and daughter.

James H. Rand, III, working in his converted stable laboratory at Bratenahl, Ohio, a Cleveland suburb, has developed a radically new disposable diapers said to be longer-wearing, more sanitary, more comfortable than anything previously developed, in its line.

The Rand diaper consists of a plastic outer "envelope" into which is inserted a newly developed, highly absorbent pad of non-woven cellulose cloth and similar materials. The diaper and pad are so designed that they scarcely touch the baby's tender skin at any place except the waistline. And the pad is chemically treated to absorb hurriedly and carry away from the baby's skin the wetness which so often causes diaper rash and bladder infections.

Rand tackled the problem at the request of Dr. Charles F. McKhann, head of Babies' and Children's Hospital in Cleveland, and professor of pediatrics at Western Reserve University.

"It was just about the peskiest job we've ever tackled," says Rand with a grin. "The first thing we had to do, believe it or not," Rand says, "was to measure the bottoms of hundreds of babies. Strange as it seems, nobody apparently had previously taken such measurements.' At least, there weren't any figures available on them."

JAMES H. RAND III (left) has made the latest change in three-cornered baby's pants, and mom (below) approves the new disposable, absorbent pad concealed by plastic "envelope" diaper. Outer covering is pre-cut to fit infant snugly about waist.

Small Talk Can Be A Big Asset

By RUTH MILLETT

HERE'S A LETTER from a woman who confesses that she is utterly miserable at any large party or with any group of slight acquaintances simply because she doesn't know how to make "small talk."

She envies the woman who can walk into a room and start chattering gaily and she wants to know if that is an accomplishment that can be learned.

Of course it is. The first thing to remember in making small talk is that "small" means unimportant.

What you talk about doesn't make a bit of difference. Nobody will really be listening to it anyway.

In a group where small talk has to be made to keep everyone from standing around feeling awkward, everybody has his own worries.

One woman is wondering if her hat is on straight. Another spies a familiar face across the room and is trying desperately to tie it up to a name. Another is trying to think up something bright and amusing to say.

So the woman who opens her mouth and starts talking doesn't need to worry that what she is saying isn't brilliant or even amusing.

She's breaking that deadly silence—and at such a time that is all that is necessary.

WILL EARN GRATITUDE OF OTHERS

Those who are listening will be grateful to her just for talking and by doing so making them feel part of a gay little group, instead of tongue-tied strangers.

And that, after all, is the whole purpose of small talk. It is to keep grown-ups who don't know each other well from feeling like embarrassed strangers.

Keep that in mind and making small talk is fairly easy and simple. Lots of people scorn small talk. But at a large gathering you can usually find them gravitating toward the person who makes small talk easily.

For even those who scorn small talk usually feel utterly miserable when they find themselves in a crowd—unless there is someone around who will make small talk for them.

TIE HINT FOR HUBBY

Your husband's shirt collars will last longer if he remembers to slip his necktie into place before donning his shirt. This, according to the American Institute of Laundering, is better than forcing the collar up and back down again after the shirt has been buttoned.

Pick Sports To Suit Age

THERE'S SOMETHING about the combination of summer, sun and sand that makes even oldsters feel like cavorting, indulging in strenuous calisthenics, staging a comeback on the tennis court or having a hearty go at the lawn mower.

This renewed athletic activity sounds like a good health-making idea, but unfortunately sudden, strenuous exercise is potentially dangerous to women who have been out of condition too long.

Year round, day in, day out, exercise of one kind or another is excellent for everyone: young, old or middle-age. And women who have kept up this kind of exercise all of their lives can go right ahead with summer calisthenics, regardless of age. But for most women it's only human to let active sports lose out to spectator sports as family responsibilities get heavier and the body becomes less flexible.

If you're planning to turn over a new leaf this summer—turn it over slowly. At the start it's a wise idea to limit your summer activity to about the same amount as you take during the winter.

You can work up gradually to more muscular activity, but choose your exercises carefully. Swimming and walking are fine for practically everyone. Shuffleboard and bowling are possibilities.

When it comes to extra-strenuous tennis, badminton, or handball, better leave it to the "young things," unless of course you've been just short of champion at those sports all along.

Sheer Stockings Veil Foot Flaws

SHEER MITTEN stockings, which veil foot flaws, are designed for wear with thonged sandals.

By ALICIA HART

BAREFOOT SANDALS which are cool and comfortable can be easy on a woman's feet but hard on her vanity.

If you have flaws which sandal straps shouldn't expose, veil your feet with nearly-nude stockings. There are many summer styles designed to put an illusory veil over feet and legs without advertising any such intent with heel or toe reinforcements.

Moreover, you can wear gossamer sheers which conceal flaws even if you wear the thonged type of barefoot sandal. The problem of the thonged strap that goes between toes is solved by wearing bare-looking "mitten" stockings.

A woman who wants her feet to look bare but at the same time needs the veiling of hosiery can achieve that effect with the mitten or two-toed stockings which allow for complete separation of toes.

Duke's Castle Was Barrier To Raiders

By Elizabeth Richmond

THE HISTORIC TOWN of Alnwick in England's northwest county of Northumberland is dominated by a magnificent castle which belongs to the Duke of Northumberland. The solid names of the streets of the town—Bondgate, Narrowgate, Bailiffsgate, Pottersgate—recall the perilous days when its inhabitants were called on to repel Scottish marauders who crossed the Border. The main street of Alnwick is crossed by the "Hotspur's Gate," a massive turreted pile used in the town's defence in bygone centuries.

Alnwick is happily situated only a few miles from the sea. To the west the heather-clad moors round Aydon Forest sweep to the Cheviot Range, while away in the east stretches the glorious sea coast.

The history of Alnwick began when Gilbert Tyson, who was a standard-bearer at the Battle of Hastings in 1066, became its owner and probably laid the foundations of the huge castle.

You can wander through the castle which now belongs to the Duke of Northumberland. You gauge the depth of the old moat, enter the doorway of the gatehouse, examine the massive keep, the chapel, the towers and the wall where you can see those parts of the masonry from the 12th century.

The stone figues on the tower battlements and the figures on the centre gateway were erected in the 14th century. Legend says that the figures were placed there to confuse the enemy.

The visitor pauses beside the 14th century draw-well, which has the original wooden pole and wheel for winding up the buckets. On the left of the archway is a bronze lamp, a copy of the famous lamp on the Pallazzo Vecchio in Florence.

MEDIEVAL KITCHENS

One of the most interesting rooms in the castle is the library, which contains about 1,600 books. Here you can see the famous Sherborne Missal, a fine example of English illuminated work, and the "Northumberland Household Book" drawn up in the 16th century to regulate the vast domestic establishment.

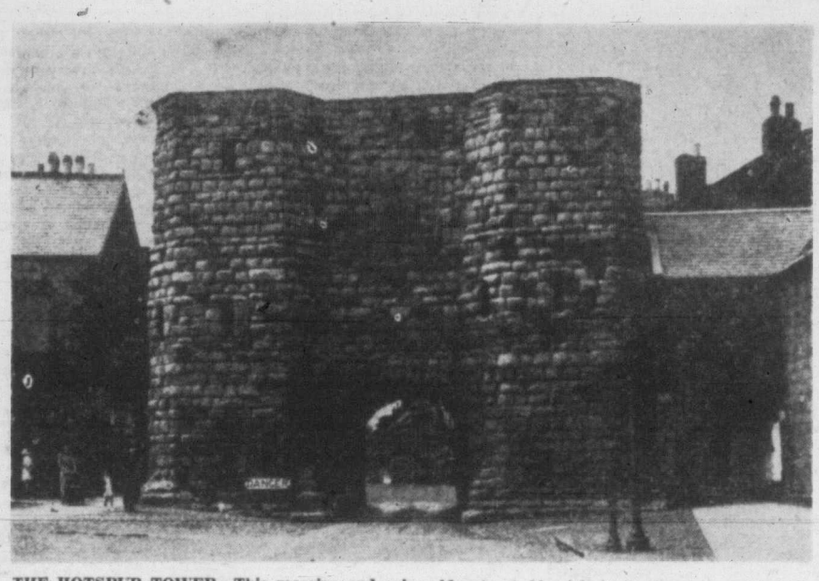
Oliver Cromwel's nightcap, Edward VI's gloves and the hairnet of Mary, Queen of Scots, find themselves somewhat curiously associated among the historical objects in this library. The medieval kitchens give one an idea of the magnitude of English hospitality.

Outside the castle is a steep hill, the Peth, which leads to the Lion Bridge, surmounted by a leaden lion with a straight tail. The Bridge was painted by the English artist, Turner, in the 18th century and is seen in his picture "Alnwick Castle by Moonlight."

A bus from Alnwick goes to Bamburgh, where Majestic Castle, ancient seat of the Kings of Northumbria, has fine grounds, open to the public.

But everyone who goes to Bamburgh wants to see the spot in the graveyard of the old church where Grace Darling is buried. Grace Darling, the Northumbrian heroine who went to the rescue of the crew of the wrecked ship, the Forfarshire, in 1838, lived with her parents at the Longstone Lighthouse off the Farne Islands. A boat can be specially chartered to take you to her lighthouse home. Her famous boat and some of the everyday articles she used are in a museum at Bamburgh.

ALNWICK CASTLE—Behind the deep moat is the historic pile now owned by the Duke of Northumberland. It contains many interesting relics.



THE HOTSPUR TOWER—This massive and grim old gate at Alnwick forms the narrowest part of the A1 road leading from the south to Scotland. It was built by the second Earl of Northumberland, and named in honor of his father, the renowned Hotspur.

London To Have Gaiety Girls Once Again

LONDON'S famed Gaiety Theatre, closed since 1939, may reopen soon. For 10 years it has been a ghost standing in Aldwych.

It was known as the original home of the glamor girl. Old timers of the Edwardian era get misty-eyed when they think about it. They say it had the "most famous stage door in the world."

The Gaiety was used badly by changing times and the war. Nazi bombs tore holes in the roof.

But even now memories of its glories are so vivid that the London County Council which owns the ground under it couldn't tear down the old building. It was permitted to stand idle on the city's highest priced real estate, a sort of shabby monument to the brightest age of the London Theatre.

Now the ministry of public works, which controls concrete, paint, lumber and other materials has agreed to permit a modest amount of repair and actor Lupino Lane, turned business man, has undertaken to bring back the Gaiety.

COLORFUL HISTORY

"We hope to be going by Christmas" Lane says.

Perhaps few theatres on earth are as rich in legend or have a history as colorful.

Many Gaiety girls made good, a half dozen of them marrying into the nobility and many becoming wealthy. Glamorous Daisy Roche became Lady Greer. Gertie Millar became the Countess Dudley. Rose Boote became Lady Headfort.

Others crashed into the millionaire class, and they did it on 30 shillings ($6) a week. For whatever creditable might be said of the old Gaiety, it was not lavish in the payroll department—thirty shillings in the chorus with stars getting up to 10 pounds ($40) a week.

Yet it was necessary, soon after the turn of the century, for the Gaiety to post a notice backstage.

"Will ladies earning less than three pounds weekly kindly refrain from drawing up to the stage in their own carriage and pair?"

LADY WHO POUTED

Among the gaiety's historical notes is the record of the chorus lady who pouted because the mean old timers wouldn't let her roll up in her carriage. Never mind, said an admirer, "the notice didn't mention automobiles." So he gave her an automobile at a time when few peers of the realm owned one.

The foreign office was involved in another Gaiety incident, the old timers recall. Britain was setting up the empire and it appeared to be good policy to entertain an African chieftain. At the Gaiety he took a fancy to Madge Saunders and insisted on buying her. It was difficult to persuade him it wasn't done that way in England. Miss Saunders, Mrs. John Henson, still chuckles over the incident.

The Gaiety had one door which only the Royal Family used, and the records indicate that King Edward VII passed through it often.

At the Gaiety the quaint Edwardian fancy of drinking champagne out of a lady's slipper got a foothold. It is recorded that from the second act onward the most popular girls all had wet feet because of the backstage champagne interludes.

A Plague On These Free Soul Hellions

By PAUL GALLICO

UP TO NOW, this department has kept its big bazoo zipped on the subject of the younger generation but I think the time is at hand to unlatch it enough to let out a small yip on the new method of bringing up the small fry.

I want to be mild, reasonable and objective about it and so will restrain myself to the point of suggesting merely that some of the progressive children of some of the progressive parents I know are the cutest little stinkers I ever met.

These are the offspring of folks who somewhere along the line in this introspective and neurotic age have stumbled across the theory that if Junior is repressed during his childhood and forbidden to sit at the dinner table with one hand in the sugar bowl, his elbow in the butter and his foot in somebody's lap, he will become subject to frustrations which when he grows up will cause him to become an unhappy millionaire, a radio orator or a comedian.

Mum Just Smiles

AND SO IN a loving effort to forestall such a calamity, these friends of mine make it a point never to forbid their young anything that happens to come into their heads.

If little Egbert wants to wham the surface of the Chippendale table with a carpenter's hammer, they let him, because he is expressing himself. If his sister Eulalia is minded to kick her Maw in the shins, Maw smiles gallantly, because the little one is forming character.

I guess maybe this will have good results when they are 30, but we will all have to face the fact that these are the most unpleasant children I have ever encountered anywhere.

Mind you, I am no supporter of the ultra-stern parent school either, the one that believes in breaking little Guglielmo's arm with a baseball bat when he reaches into the candy jar for a forbidden sweet. But somewhere between the two extremes it seems to me there ought to be some reasonable method of bringing up one's pride and heir so that it doesn't become a blight on the community in the process.

Idea Spreads

YOU MAY HOLD that this is a small matter and that the number of parents who go for this nitwitted method of educating their get is commensurately minor, but I tell you the idea is spreading. And besides it has cost me the pleasure of visiting the home of several of my friends simply because when I am there I feel a well-nigh intolerable compulsion to slug their kids

I could chance it and explain later that a prominent alienist had warned me that under no circumstances must I inhibit my impulses, but my sporting blood interferes. I just wouldn't ask anyone to give away a hundred and fifty pounds to me. I had thought of training a group of Dead End Kids, introducing them as my own uninhibited brood and turning them loose to beat the ears off these hellions that various of my enlightened friends are loosing on the world under the guise of free souls. But this involves expenditure of energy. And I am not at all sure the results would be permanent.

What's The Payoff

THE THING IS, it is all a hideous experiment and nobody knows how it is going to come out. It has only been going on about the last 10 or 12 years and none of these little horrors has yet reached the stage of maturity where anybody can tell whether it is going to pay off. And anyway, does anybody know what the payoff is to be?

There is an old saw, well-founded on truth—"Just as the twig is bent, the tree's inclined." Are we aiming for a community where when the boss says, "Oswald, will you bring me that file on the Auffenschnauffen deal," Oswald tells him to go jump in the estuary, or lets him have the file right across the kisser?

Is the millenium to be that everybody does as he or she darn pleases and in that case, to whom does the Top Sergeant give orders? If that is the aim, brother, book me one way on the first outward-bound rocket.

Blame Parents

THE WORLD could probably suffer through the tantrums of these uninhibited young catamounts if they grow up to be sterling and virtuous citizens of great value to the community. But what if they don't? And is it worth it? And have YOU seen any of these obnoxious little specimens lately?

I suppose the sensible thing to do when encountering one of these nasty little terrors is to resist the temptation to paste him and instead let Poppa have one in the eye since it's his fault that Junior has been turned into a grade A pest. But there just wouldn't be the same satisfaction somehow.

And besides when you see the fatuous look that comes over the old man's face and the love-light illuminating his eye when young Adalbert heaves a flatiron through the Venetian mirror or pours the mucilage pot over the cat, or sets fire to his baby sister, you just haven't got the heart to poke him one.

I will leave you to mull over the situation.

Correct Play Nets Seven Odd

SERVING as chairman of a committee in any club is not an easy job. We at the New York Athletic club are fortunate in having Richard E. Long as chairman of our card committee. He holds the individual championship at the club.

Dick won himself a top score in the individual tournament with this hand. When South opened the bidding with two no trump, Dick thought he was bluffing because he is a notorious psychic bidder. Of course, when East went to four spades, South could not be blamed for taking a crack at it.

It is an interesting hand to play for the maximum. Dick ruffed the jack of diamonds with the deuce of spades in dummy and immediately led the king of clubs. South put on the ace and Dick trumped. Another diamond was ruffed.

The 10 of spades was led from dummy, and when South played low, Dick was careful to play the eight of spades. He then played the queen and jack of clubs, discarding two hearts. The 10 of clubs was led, South trumped with the king and Dick overtrumped. A diamond was ruffed in dummy—thereby making seven-odd.

Bad Distribution Overcome

EDWARD P. HYDE of Santa Barbara, Calif., wrote to me recently about an interesting bridge group that was formed in the Santa Barbara Civic Recreation Centre.

A few years ago several retired gentlemen averaging approximately three-score-and-ten formed a table of bridge. Gradually the group enlarged. Retired Army and Navy officers, a playwright, several university and high school teachers, some bankers and doctors joined the group. Today they have two or three tables in play.

Mr. Hyde said, "Good and bad bridge can be seen," and he sent me today's hand. The game was made up of a playwright, two retired colonels and a former research director.

West won the king and ace of spades, then shifted to the three of diamonds. Declarer won East's queen with the ace, and discovered the bad break in trumps when he led the deuce of hearts. He won the trick in dummy with the queen, came back to his hand with the queen of clubs and played the six of diamonds, which West won with the king.

A club was returned and won in dummy. The jack of diamonds was led and trumped by East with the four of hearts. Declarer overtrumped with the five. Dummy was entered with the ace of clubs, and the eight of diamonds trumped by declarer. The jack of spades was trumped with the ace of hearts, forcing East to undertrump. This left declarer with the king-ten over East's jack-nine of trumps.

The seven of diamonds from dummy was trumped by East with the nine, declarer overtrumping with the ten. The last trick was won by declarer with the king.

Ability To Read Greens Is Secret Of Good Putting

IN GETTING READY to putt survey the overall layout of the green in order to determine the amount of slope from side to side. Then survey the immediate area around the hole in order to have some knowledge of the amount of slope you will have to contend with when the ball is coming up on the hole. At the same time give some thought as to how fast you will have to make the ball travel in order to reach the hole.

Now stand behind the ball and view the line between the ball and the hole. Whenever practical, size your putt up from the opposite direction.

This surveying and sizing up is all part of what is called "reading the greens." Much to my surprise while talking with a friend recently I discovered that most duffers are amazed by the ability of the tournament professionals to "read the greens" on strange courses so quickly. By reading the greens, of course, I mean the ability to look over the undulations, slopes and the grass on the putting greens and then decide how the ball is going to travel after you stroke it.

1. ADDRESS—Take up a comfortable position regardless of how it looks. Have your eyes directly over the top of the clubhead. Make sure that the face of the putter is at right angles to the line you have picked.

2. TAKE THE CLUB back smoothly with the hands and arms, making sure that the clubface remains square to the line. Do not open or close the clubface on the backswing in putting.

3. AT IMPACT make a conscious effort to hit the ball squarely regardless of the distance. Do not try to hit up down on a putt. On the follow through make sure that the face of the putter is square to the line. Do not open or close the clubface.

Locke Is Best

BOBBY LOCKE, the South African, is the greatest putter I have ever seen. Bobby has a great putting stroke, but more than that he has an uncanny ability to read greens. I have never been to South Africa, but people who are familiar with the greens there tell me that they are very grainy. The reason that our greens held no terrors for Locke was his ability to read any kind of green.

Naturally, this ability is developed only by experience, but there are certain little hints which I will give you which will help you to become proficient at it. If the tournament playing professionals are more proficient at reading the greens than the ordinary player it is only because they have to play on so many different types of greens in the course of a year.

While it has never given me too much trouble I have been told that the greens are hard to read at Riviera in Los Angeles, site of the 1948 U.S. Open championship. I won the 1947 and 1948 Los Angeles Opens there and the secret to putting well at Riviera is to locate the ocean in relation to the greens.

I AM USING Riviera as an example because it is a well-known course and because it offers a situation which is true at almost all oceanside courses. You can't always see the ocean at Riviera, but it is there nevertheless and has its effect on the roll of your putts on the greens. Everything breaks on the Riviera greens, and almost all oceanside course greens for that matter, toward the ocean.

When playing mountain courses, remember that putts will always break away from the mountains. This is true even if in "reading the greens" it doesn't look that way to you. Putting greens always slope away from the mountains on mountain courses because of the weather and erosion.

What you will have to guard against in reading greens on mountain courses, however, is little things which your knowledge of golf will tell you can't be true, although they appear to be so to the naked eye. You'll learn what these things are only by experience and so I won't confuse you by trying to outline them here.

Half The Battle

IF YOU CAN locate the direction the grain of the green runs, you have won half the battle in your effort to get your putt down. One way of doing it is to look for the shine on the greens as you read them.

If you can see a shine on the green when you are lining up your putt it means that you are putting down the grain of the green. The ball is going to travel very fast. You will have to make allowances for the speed of the ball down the grain. Otherwise, if you make a mistake you will be sure to run by the hole several feet and will have another and even more difficult putt coming against it.

When I see a shine on the grass on the right side in lining up a putt I play to the right even if I don't see a break in the green in that direction because I know the grain is running from right to left. The reverse is true if you see the shine on the left and you must then make your allowances accordingly.

Must Hit Harder

IF YOU ARE on the other side of the hole looking back toward your ball while trying to line it up and you see the shine, you will have to putt against the grain. When you putt against the grain it stands to reason you have to hit the ball a little harder to reach the hole.

Sometimes on a green you will find that the grain of the green breaks to the right while the roll and undulation of the green is to the left. When that happens you will have to decide whether you are going to play the grain or the roll.

Occasionally in this situation it is a good idea to play the ball straight in the hope that one will offset the other. But that is something you must learn for yourself via the trial and error method.

You should also develop your ability to tell the kinds of grasses on the greens and their consistency through the feel of your feet on them as you walk around. Get so that you know the feel of the various grasses used on the greens and their relation to the speed of the ball, and that knowledge will be very helpful to you in learning how to putt.

Remember in putting that the stroke can't do it all. You have to know how hard to hit the ball and where to aim it.

Keep Food Garden Busy By Rotation

By CECIL SOLLY

ALTHOUGH WE DID not get too early a start with the vegetable garden this year, some of the earliest rows are providing radishes, onions, spinach, lettuce and other "first" crops.

As crops are taken out of the garden to be used fresh, canned or put into the frozen locker, the rich garden soil should be immediately planted to a "follow" crop. Not only will this second crop be a very welcome addition to the food supply, but the garden soil will actually be improved for next year. The fall crop will provide a fresh garden supply into the winter months, conserving the canned vegetables for winter and early spring.

It is a great mistake to think that any garden needs a rest. The more it works, the better it produces. However, it does need a change—a change of vegetable varieties—as often as possible, but of course this change of crops must be made systematically so as to obtain the greatest benefit from the plan.

The colleges have used the findings of the Danes and English to short-cut their own work to such an extent that today men like Professor Bouquet and Dr. Snyder rank very high in the nation's esteem for the patient work they did in previous years which now make much of the needed information available to us.

Take advantage of our climate and make the most of our fall crop.

Second Crop Hints

EVERY GARDEN PLAN is different, but here are a few suggestions:

Since peas are all over by summer, the space where they were grown should be utilized. If the soil is really rich, cauliflower or leek plants may be set between the rows, to mature successfully.

Tall peas should be followed by Savoy cabbage or St. Valentine broccoli.

Early beets can be followed by bush beans.

In spinach rows, plant leeks.

Follow bush beans with fall carrots.

land spinach in the empty radish rows.

Of course it is not possible to give definite laws or rules, because of the great variation of soils, sand, clay or muck difference in drainage. The weather must be considered also as when we plant these seeds, it must be remembered that growing conditions will be different from our

After early spring onions, plant kohl rabi.

As you pull each lettuce plant, set a bush bean seed in its place.

Transplant celery plants now into the rows where broad beans were picked.

Plant Swiss Chard or New Zealand spring crops. Knowing this, we can work accordingly.

In Three Groups

BUT IT IS possible, thanks to the fine work done locally, to give definite plans which may be modified or adapted as necessary. There are three groups of vegetables that are grown in most gardens, if one segregates them into the part of the plant which is used for food.

They are:

(1) The roots, which comprise all vegetables whose tubers or swollen roots are used for food. Among these are potatoes, beets, carrots, onions, turnips, rutabaga, radish, parsnip, root parsley, root celery and many others.

(2) The leaves, which include all vegetables which are used for their stem or leaf parts, such as lettuce, endive, celery, cabbage, brussells sprouts, kale, spinach, broccoli, cauliflower, etc.

(3) The fruits, which are that part of any vegetable which is produced by the "setting" of the flower. In this group are corn, tomatoes, cucumber, pumpkin, squash, peas and beans.

Correct Order

CROP ROTATION consists of planning to grow these three groups in such a well organized manner that no crop is followed by one of the same group. The most satisfactory rotation is to have fruits, followed by leaves, followed by roots.

That is to say that if any of No. 3 group of fruits were grown in an area, the best "follow crop" would be a No. 2 leaf vegetable and then a No. 1 root vegetable next.

The best way to remember the order is to start at the top of the plant and work down—fruit, leaves, roots. To make the work of planning easy and the resultant garden labor as light as possible, it is wise to keep all the vegetables of each group together in the same area and rotate them around the groups each year.

Rotation may consist of growing several crops in succession over any period of time, either during one season or over a series of years. The reason for this is that plants differ widely in their food requirements, leaf crops (such as cabbage) needing relatively large quantities of nitrogen, root crops (such as beets) requiring abundant potash, and seed or fruit crops (as tomatoes, beans, etc.) demanding ample supplies of phosphorous. Crops of the same type planted consecutively in the same area deplete it unevenly—they cannot, themselves, make the most and best growth.

Controls Trouble

THERE'S ANOTHER important reason why the groups of vegetables should be rotated around. It is so because the insects and diseases, particularly the latter, may be kept under better control.

So many troubles which, soil-born, are carried in the soil from year to year. As a general rule every vegetable has its own troubles and acts as a "host" for them—they don't go to other sorts. For instance, troubles which bother peas never affect lettuce or carrots. So, to eliminate pests, one of the most important "helps" is never to have any vegetable in the same plot in successive years.

Everyone knows that although we generally use the same kind of fertilizer in every part of the vegetable garden, every vegetable is composed of different minerals in various proportions.

Actually every garden is just right for about one group of vegetables and only fair for the others—so we fertilize in an attempt to obtain as much of a balance as possible. Since each vegetable takes out of the soil different amounts of various plant foods, it is quite easy to understand that if we grow the same plant in any area for several seasons, it will gradually produce less and less. For this reason the materials it needs for perfect growth are not available in the soil.

Increases Harvest

BY USING a plan and changing the crop grown in any part of the garden as often as possible, it has been proven that results are often as much as double. Crops, when rotated, properly, not only are able to avoid soil depletion, but they, through their variant habits of growth, are able to use the various parts of the soil in a different manner.

For instance, as we all know, their root structures are entirely different and penetrate the soil in quite different ways. Wherever the roots establish themselves, there the plant takes up its food and water (or tries to).

Another of the items taken into consideration when planning rotation, is the difference in root growth of each plant. Roots of all vegetables grow in different forms and directions; as roots penetrate the soil they do a great many things to it, which would need a scientist to explain, but which, in our language is just that it makes the soil better.

The cultivation and continuous stirring of the soil and the often-as-possible spading or plowing, do great things for the fertility of the soil. Stirring, mixing, turning the soil is controlled somewhat by the care which has to be exercised not to disturb or damage any of the nearby plant roots, but the correct cultivation of any vegetable rows has an unmistakable bearing not only on the growing crop, but on the succeeding ones for several years.

Late Sown Seeds Give Long Fall Bloom

BY SELECTING flowers of named varieties, of easily-grown flowers, striking color-scheme gardens can be grown from seed sown late in the season.

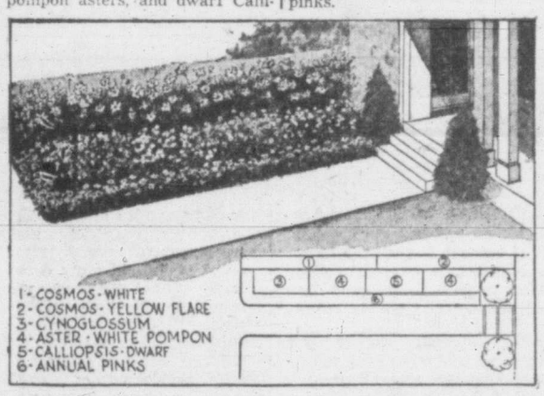
Flowers of named varieties, all of the same height, form and color, when grown in considerable mass, are much superior for decorative planting to mixtures, in which many colors and sometimes several forms are blended. This kind of planting is especially effective in formal arrangements, near buildings.

Illustrated is such a planting in the door-yard of a modern home, where tall shrubs or evergreens would quickly grow too large for the location. The colors used are white, yellow, blue and pink, a combination that would harmonize with almost any color in the house walls and trim.

Cosmos Sensation white, and Cosmos Orange Flare are used as a background planting. Immediately in front of these are the blue cynoglossum, the Chinese forget-me-not, white pompon asters, and dwarf Calliopsis, which is the annual form of the perennial Coreopsis, and bears yellow and orange flowers with brown markings. In the foreground is a ribbon planting of annual pinks, bearing flowers of pink, red and white blended in attractive patterns.

These flowers can all be started from seed sown in the early summer, and will give a long period of bloom, lasting until frost kills them in the fall. When they are dead, the space they occupy can be planted to spring flowering bulbs, which will give a display of color from the first spring thaws, until time to plant next year's garden of annuals.

Cosmos Sensation white grows four feet tall and bears large single white flowers from mid summer until frost. Cosmos Orange Flare has bright orange flowers, somewhat resembling Coreopsis in shape, and having a long season of bloom. Cynoglossum has varieties of both dark blue and light blue. Its forget-me-not flowers blossom without ceasing all summer, as do the dwarf Calliopsis and annual pinks.



Summer Mulch Helps Plants And Planter

A MULCH is a covering laid on the soil to protect the roots of plants. In the winter it keeps the frost in; and in the summer it keeps the moisture in. As science places garden operation under critical scrutiny, the rating of summer mulching goes up, as fast as that of cultivation comes down.

Mulching, say the research men, will do all the good that cultivation can, without doing harm. For the leisure-time gardener this is all to the good. It combines leisure, which all gardeners enjoy, with better gardening—a rare hook-up. And as mulching becomes more popular, more mulches are being developed.

Latest is ground-up corn cobs, which florists are using in their greenhouses when they can get it at the right price. Corn cobs are a by-product of hybrid-corn seed plants, and are becoming plentiful and cheap where this seed is grown. Ground cob is light, porous and weed-free. If applied four inches deep around tomato plants, or between rows, it will keep weeds down, let both air and moisture into the ground and prevent drying out. But when spaded into the soil it will rob plants of nitrogen until it is thoroughly broken down; so extra nitrogen should be applied, say a pound of balanced plant-food to 200 square feet.

BY SPREADING a mulch once, the gardener saves many hours of cultivating.

The lovely thing about corn cob mulches — and other good mulches as well — is that the directions say: "Spread it on the ground around the plants, and then leave them alone." No more hoeing.

Strange things have been discovered in tests of mulching. Ohio state university found that grass made a good mulch, growing between the rows.

Instead of a hoe the gardener uses a lawn mower. Newspapers, many thicknesses deep, held down by stones, serve well. Lawn clippings, dried first then spread on the ground, with the first layer hoed into the soil, are fine.

Manure is excellent, except for its weed seed; others are straw, salt hay (weedless), peat moss, pine needles, coconut fibre, sawdust, burlap, dried leaves, and glass, yes, fibre glass, which can be obtained in blankets to lay on borders in the fall and will last many years.

Remember, apply a mulch over moist soil. Soak the soil first in the summer. And remember that if the soil ever does dry out under the mulch, you may have to remove the mulch to soak the soil quickly.

This is especially true of paper mulch and rocks, and concrete slabs, which are being used in some sections for modern garden effects.

Seattle Team's Bid To Cut Home Costs

By Fred Zavatfero

A CONTEST that began quietly in Seattle more than a year ago may set a pattern for solving the housing shortage riddle. It's a contest with all winners.

To stimulate the building of low cost dwellings, architects and builders organized a voluntary, informal building "regatta." Seventeen teams, each composed of an architect and a builder, entered the race to build the best type of "service" home that modern planning and building can produce.

The "service" home is one that costs little but has all the conveniences the modern family requires.

Architect Edward Baar and builder Maury Setzer, the first team to cross the finish line, completed a 20-house project in suburban Seattle which has set a high mark for the remaining teams to shoot at.

Economies Sought

On 60x135-foot lots, the homes were designed to maintain individuality and spaciousness.

SERVICE HOME IN SEATTLE—Built by Baar and Setzer, it costs $7,750, or $48 a month. Architect Baar gets away from standardization by tricks like moving the car port around. It's at the side here; on others, it may be at the back. The car port makes a fine place for the children to play on a rainy day.

Baar and Setzer realized that the housewife is immediately hostile to the wartime housing project type of development. In order to avoid standardization, they used a flexible pattern.

Changing the location of one room varies the appearance of the houses, without increasing the cost of construction.

Materials were selected for utility and beauty.

"We used economy grades of lumber where the finer grades would be an extravagance," said Setzer. "Economy or service, grades of lumber have a few knots in the wood, but are strong and durable."

Assembly line methods and modern building techniques helped keep costs down. Windows, doors and closets were carefully designed to eliminate unnecessary costs and materials.

The closets in the houses are built-in with curtains instead of doors.

"By eliminating the closet doors, we were able to save enough money to furnish the completed house with a washing machine at no extra cost," Baar explained.

Just A Start

BAAR WORKED with window and glass manufacturers for several weeks to design a window that would be original and offer view possibilities.

"We've just started," he said. "Although our houses sell for $7,750, we want to build a better house at a lower price. The service home, with refrigerator, heating unit and washing machine, sells for $48 a month. The cost must be lowered."

"The service home is still an experiment," Setzer pointed out. "In another year, the other teams will have made more progress. What we have learned here can be used by architects and builders throughout the country."

Baar and Setzer have selected the housewife as the final authority on the efficiency of their houses. They have asked for suggestions from buyers, and incorporated some of the recommendations in the construction of later houses.

"After all," they said, "we're building homes, not just houses."

Deer Fern Is One Of Nature's Gems

By ROBERT CONNELL

THE BEAUTY AND INTEREST given to scenery by ferns is not so generally recognized as it might well be. In our day of swift locomotion the passing landscape shows us trees and flowering shrubs and such smaller plant as are sufficiently massed and colorful to impress the eye, and the large clumps of sword and lady fern and thickets of braken are conspicuous enough.

The smaller ferns that have their habitation along creek beds or on cliff faces or among broken rock or in the shady solitude of the forest are only to be seen by the foot-traveler, and only by him if his inquisitiveness takes him nature-ward.

Given this mental attitude, he can hardly fail to be struck with the charm the ferns impart to the spots in which they grow, a charm independent of size.

I recall the day some years ago when a friend and I went up Sandstone Creek above the bridge and, in the triangular space between the two forks there formed, found ourselves in a wonderful growth of maidenhair and deer-fern, the feathery deep green fronds of the former with the tall fertile comb-like fronds of the latter rising above their whorl of bright green fertile ones.

The deer-fern is one of the beauties of our southwest coastal border though it is found in damp woods elsewhere.

Beauty Spot Gone

EVEN THE FAMILIAR sword-fern is seen at its best by the traveler on foot. Some of the tallest specimens I have seen were close by the old road to Sooke Lake but the finest exhibition of its beauty was once visible in the bottom of Skookum Gulch in the days before the spruce forest there was cut down.

There through the little valley wandered a small stream and underneath the shade of the great spruces were dozens of vaselike clumps of sword-fern, not crowded together but dotted here and there on the smooth mossy floor. What a scene of desolation the little valley presents today!

Mystery Title

THE WANDERER among the more or less treeless hills on the east side of Sooke River a few miles above its mouth is struck, if he is botanically inclined, with the numerous tufts of a low-growing olive-green fern which grow quite abundantly in places.

The clustered fronds grow about six inches or more high and have a blade more or less triangular in outline and much divided into many narrow pointed segments.

This is the cliff-brake, sometimes known as the Indian's Dream, but why I cannot say. Its occurrence and color give a very characteristic appearance to the hillsides on which it occurs.

In somewhat similar places but in the neighborhood of Victoria and Goldstream you will come across in your ramblings the familiar silver-back fern. Its favorite situation is under the shadow of some great rock where, in spring, its young fronds appear, and show themselves shortly as dark green on their upper side, but with a waxy covering below that ranges in color from silvery to a creamy yellow. It is a very pretty fern though its triangular fronds are rather stiff to the touch.

Place To Search

UP AMONG the rocky places the lover of ferns will generally be rewarded for diligent search. The north side of the hilltops should be particularly searched and the cliffs facing in that direction. Here, for example, he may be fortunate enough to come on the rock woodsia, a pretty little fern with pale brownish or yellowish stems and pinnate fronds which bear pale hairs and glands.

Another fern of rocky places is the parsley fern, whose green barren frond recalls faintly the familiar plant of the kitchen-garden: the fertile one lacks this resemblance since the segments in it are narrowed very much. And still another fern of the hillsides and summits is the maiden-hair spleenwort. Its bright green leaflets or pinnae are small and more or less oval in shape and are arranged in two rows, one on each side of the purplish black stem. The size and shape of the leaflets and their contrast of color with the dark shining stems has suggested the addition of the descriptive "maidenhair" to the "spleenwort."

The latter has reference to the plant's reputation once upon a time as a remedy for the spleen. The little maidenhair spleenwort is of the same genus as the familiar and lovely lady-fern whose graceful feathery fronds of pale green make tall vase-like clusters in damp and shady places such as the alder woods at the mouth of creeks and rivers. The name of the genus is Asplenium, with the same general meaning as the English "spleenwort."

Likes Shady Banks

ANOTHER LOVELY little fern inhabits woodlands and shady banks of creeks. Its triangular fronds are more delicate in color and texture than those of any of the ferns mentioned. This is the oak fern, also known as the pale mountain polypody and the tender three-branched polypody.

It springs from a running root-stock and when first above the ground the youthful frond shows a stem with two branches and three little green balls, one at each end of the branches and main stem. These are the juvenile fronds which quickly unroll themselves.

This fern is, in my experience, not very common near Victoria. It used to be abundant on the banks of Waugh Creek just beyond Goldstream Station until the logging-off of that part of the city's water-works area some years ago destroyed a beautiful spot and the ferns.

It is no doubt found in other shady places along some of the creeks still untouched by the axe. Wolf Creek, a tributary of the Sooke for example.

PUZZLES & PASTIMES

Mere facial prettiness and shapeliness of body no longer are the sole determining factors in one so-called beauty contest. The judges also consider talents and accomplishments of the entrants.

In this year's competition, the judges first eliminated half of the entrants because they had poor voices, but then restored 10 of these because they were choir singers. Of the entrants then remaining, one-third were eliminated when they were found not to be college graduates, but two of these were reinstated because they held teaching certificates. Next, half of the survivors were ruled out when found unwilling to sign contracts for exclusive appearances under management of the contest promoters, but one was put back in the list of eligibles when she changed her mind and signed.

That left 12 girls to be considered by the judges. How many had entered the contest?

It's no use to count the girls in the picture above, because there was no photo made during the competition which showed all of the contestants.

Answer: Forty girls had entered the contest.

RIDDICULOUS

How do we know that heat is swifter than cold?

Because anybody can catch cold.

Why is a straw hat like a kiss over the telephone?

Because it is not felt.

When is an orange like a church belfry?

Find The Ages

Three members of the board of directors of an orphanage give, each year, a sum of money which is determined by multiplying the ages of their respective daughters together. Each has one daughter. This year they gave $280 to the orphanage, the three girls' ages totaling 26 years. What will they give next year?

Solution: Four hundred and thirty-two dollars. Their ages will be nine, eight and six years.

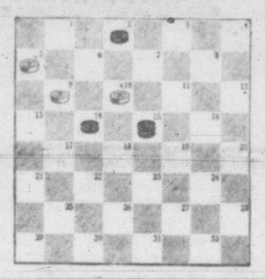
WHITE seems to be going down to defeat in this poser prepared to whet the wits of checker players by Millard Hopper, national unrestricted champion. But White can turn the tables and defeat Black in just three moves. How?

(White moves up the board.)

Solution by Hopper: White moves 9 to 6. Black jumps from 2 to 9. White moves 5 to 1, and secures a king. The Black king jumps 15 to 6. White jumps 1 to 17. Black then goes 9-13, and White moves 17-22 to victory.



Magic You Can Do

YOU MAY have seen a baffling egg trick performed on the stage by a professional magician. Here is a simple version of this famous trick, which you can do at a party without any special apparatus.

Borrow a ladie's pocketbook, after telling the owner to remove all the contents. Let each person in your audience examine the pocketbook, to convince himself it is absolutely "ordinary" and that nothing is concealed in it. The pocketbook is then returned to you, you wave your magic wand over it, mutter "jabberwocky," then open the bag and produce a real egg. Yes, both hands have been shown empty before you reach into the bag.

The secret of how this is done is not palming, but a confederate. The last person in the audience who examines the pocketbook is your confederate. He or she has a real hard boiled egg concealed. When the pocketbook is examined, the egg is dropped into the bag.

A good ending for this trick is to break the egg and eat it.

Wisdom In Cryptogram

IT IS BELIEVED that if you're rich, you can have anything you want. Josh Billings made an interesting observation about this belief, and it's worth solving this substitution cryptogram to read his words:

HG BMF DMARF MHEBAJI AY BMF DAJRL BMFJF HE UZB AGF BMHGS BMXR KAGFI QXGGAB UZI — BA DHB, BMF DXS AY X LAS'E EXHR.

That apostrophe provides an immediate clue to the identity of one letter and should speed your solution.

Solution: In the whole history of the world there is but one thing that money cannot buy—to wit, the wag of a dog's tail.

STAMPS by R. Nairne

Empire Plans For Universal Postal Union's 75th Anniversary

FULL DETAILS of the British Colonial stamps to be issued on Oct. 10 to commemorate the 75th Anniversary of the Universal Postal Union have been announced by the Crown Agents.

Each of the 64 colonies or protectorates will issue four stamps, the total face value of each set to be about two shillings. Four different designs will be used—one for each denomination—and these will be shared by each of the colonies.

There is one exception—New Hebrides—which will use just one of the designs for all four stamps.

It is news to learn that this colony—or rather Condominium—(for it is governed jointly by British and France) is to participate in the series, for since the beginning of the war it ceased to issue stamps of its own, as far as the writer knows.

TWO SETS OF STAMPS

On account of its dual form of government New Hebrides will actually have two sets—one with inscriptions in English, with the usual crown and script "C.A." watermark, and the other in French, showing the letters "R.F." in the watermark. Collectors of the stamps of the Empire will not consider the latter a British Colonial issue, of course.

Philatelists have been hoping that the stamps would be all bicolored, as this would have made them much more attractive and popular, but no doubt for reasons of economy this will not be attempted.

CHANGE TO CENTS

It has been noted in this column recently that certain changes were impending in the currencies of some of the colonies, and in these U.P.U. sets we note their first appearance. For instance the sets for Aden and the two Aden States are expressed for the first time in cents and shillings, instead of annas and rupees, the values being 20c blue, 30c red, 50c orange, and shilling, azure. Somaliland shows a similar change-over, the set consisting of 10c red, 30c blue, 50c violet, and 1 shillings orange.

In addition to these new currencies we note that three more of the West Indies have gone over to the decimal system for the first time, as follows:

Dominica 5c azure, 6c brown, 12c violet, 24c olive.

Grenada, 5c blue, 6c olive, 12c olive, 24c brown.

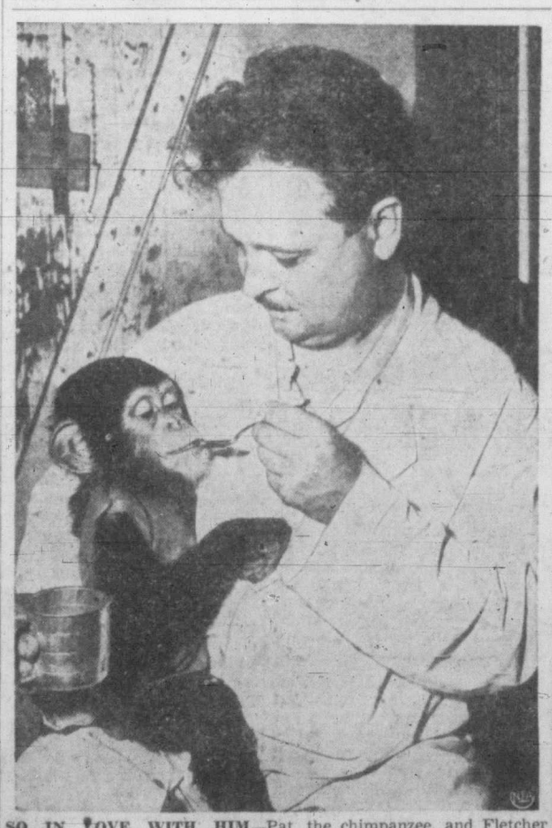
St. Lucia, 5c violet, 6c orange, 12c purple, 24c green.

(New regular issues for the above colonies in dollars and cents may therefore be expected as soon as they can be printed.)

Brunei will be a newcomer in the commemorative field with a set comprising an 8c red, 15c blue, 25c purple, and 50c grey.

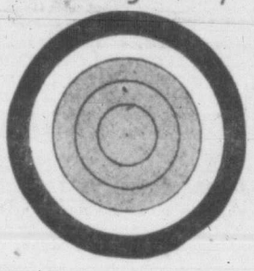
Ceylon will have a set of three values of its own design, and these are to be bi-colored as usual. Trans-Jordan's set of five will round off the issues of the colonies and protectorates.

In addition to all these, however, there will be the usual sets for Britain itself, and these will no doubt be also overprinted for use in Morocco, Tangier, Bahrain, Kuwait, and Muscat. The Dominions will probably participate too, so it is fortunate that no very high values are included, for, coming so soon after the Silver Wedding series, the average collector is sorely pressed to keep his head above water these days.



SO IN LOVE WITH HIM—Pat, the chimpanzee, and Fletcher Reynolds, director of the Cleveland, O., Zoo, are practically inseparable, as you can plainly see. Fresh from the Belgian Congo, Pat developed double pneumonia shortly after his arrival at the zoo and Reynolds personally began hand-feeding the young chimp and administering his medicine. Now nearly well again, Pat puts up a howl at the thought of feeding himself, so Reynolds has to go on with the coddling. The zoo boss is delighted that Pat will survive but concerned over the chimp's attachment to him. Reynolds has other things to do. And besides, that chimp might be making a monkey out of him.

Grinding Away



THE FACE of a grindstone 25 inches in diameter is marked off with concentric circles whose diameters differ by five inches. Three men who bought the grindstone for $25 to sharpen all their tools, agree to share the cost in proportion to the amount of stone each man uses.

What is each man's share, assuming there is no waste, if the first man uses and wears out the area in black as shown in the diagram; the second man uses and wears out the white area, and the third man wears out the shaded area in centre?

Solution: Use formula: Area of a circle equals the radius squared times Pi. Dark Area: 9 Pi; White Area: 7 Pi; Shaded Area: 5 Pi; Stone: 25 Pi; Ratio: 9:7:5 or 600 would be $9; $7; $5. The size of the stone makes no difference, so one inch for the smallest radius, can be used in the calculation. The shaded area in centre and the black area form an optical illusion. They are equal.

Crowning Glory For Men Too!

A DAY when all men's haircuts will be by appointment, "so more time can be given to individual styles," is foreseen by Irving Platt, 26-year-old London barber.

Irving is trying to entice his customers away from the hackneyed "short back and sides" to new styles, such as the Regent Military (long at the sides), Regent Long (parting at the nape of the neck, almost like rudimentary pigtails), Chester (wavy style), Manchester (straight back) and the Argent (severe style for businessmen).

"Barbers should be more enterprising," he said. "They could do much more to interest their customers in the new styles. I'm now running an intensive campaign and it's meeting with some success."

Customers who cling stubbornly to the old-fashioned "short back and sides" and decline to be interested in new gents' hairdos are called "rough-heads" in some quarters of the barbering profession.

"Most men think it is effeminate to pay any particular attention to their hair style," Irving said. "Yet if they will look back into history they'll find plenty of sword-thrusting he-men took trouble with their hair."

Which One?

TRY your friends on this one. What, within one minute, is the only letter of the alphabet not used in spelling the names of the 48 States?

Answer: It is the 17th letter—Q.

Famous Nurse Became Lady Of The Lamp

By UNCLE RAY

"LADY OF THE LAMP" During Round of Hospital

HARDLY A WEEK after she reached the hospital at Scutari, Turkey, Florence Nightingale was given this message: "Make ready for 510 wounded from the Battle of Balaclava."

The hospital already was crowded, and there were too few beds for the new shipment of wounded, but the soft-spoken, gentle-hearted Englishwoman was equal to the task. She and the nurses quickly cut pieces of cloth into shape for mattresses, sewed the pieces together, and "stuffed the bags."

In less than eight hours the new mattresses were ready and were laid on the floor. The 510 soldiers came the same day, and their wounds were dressed.

Among the wounded were many Russians. They belonged to the enemy, but in the hospital they were cared for as well as could be.

BOILERS SET UP

It had been the custom to wash hospital bed clothing in cold water. This meant that it did not come out really clean. Miss Nightingale ordered boilers to be set up. This cut down the trouble from vermin.

Better food was served to the sick and wounded soldiers. They also were given their meals more promptly.

Some of the old army doctors complained that the women were making too many changes, but Florence Nightingale slowly won them over to her way of thinking. The head of the Army Medical Service wrote: "Females are apt to discover many needs that a man might not think of."

Making the rounds of the hospital, at night as well as by day, Florence Nightingale came to be called "The Lady of the Lamp."

Each day Florence Nightingale tried to find new ways to make nursing better at the big hospital in Turkey. She carried out plan after plan, and at length her work began to tell.

The fearful death rate was cut down. It stood at 427 out of each thousand soldiers in the month of February, 1855, but two months later it was down to 107 per thoussand. The next month, June, it was only 22 per thousand.

People in Great Britain and other lands sent money for use in hospital work. From New Zealand came a sum amounting to $5,000 in our money, and from Australia a gift of $2,500. The great nurse also used some of her own money for the cause.

After six months in Turkey, Florence Nightingale decided to go closer to the scene of action. She crossed the Black Sea and landed in the Crimea.

VICTIM OF ILLNESS

In the Crimea she went on with her work of nursing. Among her patients were some who suffered from "Crimean fever," and she fell victim to this disease. Her illness caused widespread worry, but she grew well again, and did more work for the soldiers.

After the war ended, she went back to England and started a training school for nurses. More than any other woman she should be given honor for the present system of careful training for nurses.

Florence Nightingale lived to the age of 90. Her death took place in 1910.

Venus And Earth Are 'Twin' Planets

BETTY LA PONTA, age 12, has asked me this question, says Uncle Ray:

"About how large is the earth?"

The earth is almost the same size as the bright and beautiful planet called Venus. Venus and the earth have been called "twin sisters."

Some twins differ a bit in size, and there is a difference in diameter of about 3 per cent in the case of the two planets. The earth has a diameter of 7,926 miles, while the diameter of Venus is about 7,700 miles.

The earth is a great deal larger than Mercury or Mars, and it is believed to be larger than Pluto. It is much smaller than Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus or Neptune.

The distance around the earth at the equator is just under 25,000 miles. If an airplane made a constant speed of 250 miles an hour along the line of the equator, it would need 100 hours to circle the globe.

Fast trips have been made around the world, but, so far, no aviator has followed the equator all the way. There is less distance on a line of, say, 45 degrees north latitude than along the equator.

Swift round-the-world trips have been made. One of these was performed two years ago by the "Bombshell," which flew 20,000 miles in just under 79 hours.

Speed has something to do with size. That is why we often hear people say, "The world is growing smaller."

The earth is the same size as it was in the time of Magellan, but it took Magellan's men three years to sail around the globe. Now, it can be circled by a fast airplane in three or four days.

The earth is slightly flattend at the poles. The distance from the North Pole to the South Pole is about 26 miles less than the distance through the earth at the equator.

The area of the earth's surface is about 197,000,000 square miles. That is a round number, but it is very close. It includes both the land and the water surface of the globe.

47 Already Dead In U.S. Holiday

NEW YORK (CP)—Violent accidents took 47 lives at the start of the three-day fourth of July holiday in the United States.

Thirty-two persons died in traffic accidents since 6 p.m. (local time) Friday. Eleven drowned, and four were killed in miscellaneous accidents.

The National Safety Council has estimated that 290 persons will lose their lives in highway accidents over the three-day period.

Baseball Gambling By Television New Puzzle For Police

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A new racket has sprung up in Los Angeles to harass police—television baseball gambling.

Casinos are springing up in various sections of the city. Croupiers stand behind long green tables, singing out frequently-changing odds on all the standard possibilities in the game being televised.

Will the batter fly out, strike out, single, knocked the ball out of the park? Will the runner go to second on the next pitch? What will the next pitch be, ball or strike? There's betting action on every move, but the bettor has to be on the alert to get his money down before the television camera decides what's what.

It's against the law, just as betting at baseball parks is against the law. The fad may not last but patrons who have taken part say business is booming.

Rochon, Quebec's Tennis Champion

MONTREAL (CP)—Henri Rochon regained his former Quebec Lawn Tennis Association singles championship today by defeating Jim Macken in straight sets, 6-4, 6-4, 6-2.

Rochon, with tricky net drops, held the upper hand throughout in a hard-fought match played under a blistering hot sun. Macken had difficulty with his services, faulting a number of times.

Bulgarian Premier, One Of World's Leading Reds, Dies

LONDON (AP)—Georgi Mikhailovich Dimitrov, Premier of Bulgaria and one of the foremost leaders in world communism, died today, the Moscow radio announced. He was 67.

He had been a life-long revolutionary, an exile, trusted agent of Prime Minister Joseph Stalin of Russia; a principal defendant in the German Reichstag fire trial in 1933, and probably the most important Communist outside Russia.

The announcement distributed by the Soviet Monitor here said death was due to diabetes. Dimitrov had been under treatment in the Bordika Sanitarium near Moscow for nearly three months.

He was granted leave from the premiership in April to obtain the treatment. Vassil Kolarov, vice-premier and foreign minister, became acting premier at that time.

The highest councils in Russia, the Central Committee of the Soviet Communist Party and the ministers of the U.S.S.R., made the announcement of death.

They said it caused them profound grief.

LONG IN EXILE

Dimitrov was an exile from Bulgaria for 22 years because of his early revolutionary life, but he remained an obscure figure until he was accused of engineering the Reichstag fire conspiracy.

Hitler, just risen to power when the Reichstag building in Berlin burned the night of Feb. 27, 1933, put the blame on Communists.

Dimitrov confounded his judges and eventually was acquitted. The fire mystery never was cleared up. Hitler's gang was accused by anti-Nazi sources of setting the fire and trumping up charges against the Communists to serve its own purposes. Dimitrov went to Moscow.

From then on Dimitrov was known to the world. He became general secretary to the old Comintern, the Comunist international network, in 1935, and stayed on the job until the Comintern was disbanded in 1943.

After the war, Dimitrov returned to his native country and became premier with the blessing of Russia in 1946. His police regime was called the "Iron Broom" by his enemies.

Using the old Comintern tactics, Dimitrov became a spearhead of the new Cominform attacks that isolated and lambasted a neighbor Communist ruler, Premier Tito of Yugoslavia. He fought the Marshall Plan with all his waning strength.

Dimitrov was born June 18, 1882, at Kovachevtsi, near Sofia. He took early to revolutionary tendencies and was jailed one and a half years for inciting disobedience among Bulgarian soldiers who were siding with Germany against Russia during the First World War.

Man Held, Another Sought In Edmonton On Murder Charge

EDMONTON (CP)—With one man already charged with murder, police today sought another man believed to be involved in the death of a 60-year-old warehouse worker whose body was dug from a shallow grave in suburban West Jasper Place Thursday night by investigating R.C.M.P. officers.

Police said Thomas Lee, had been charged with the murder of William W. Mackay, who was killed and robbed of $170 following a drinking party at Lee's suburban home Thursday night. The body was dug from Lee's garden.

Lee was taken into custody after his wife had telephoned city police Thursday night to report Mackay's death. She said her husband had prevented her from reporting the death earlier.

Police said Mackay had been hit over the head, probably with a piece of lead pipe, and robbed. The body was dragged through the back garden and covered with earth in a flower bed.

Two men were hired Friday to dig a large hole in Lee's front lawn where police said Mackay's body probably would have been reburied.

Mackay was said to have attended a party at Lee's home Thursday night with Lee and another unidentified man. Police are seeking this other man, whose identity they declined to reveal.

Lee is scheduled to appear for preliminary hearing next week.

More Ford Workers Authorize Strike

DETROIT (AP) — Sixty-thousand workers at the Rouge plant of the Ford Motor Co., today voted a strike subject to call by the International.

The C.I.O. Local 600 announced tabulation of the secret ballot showed 2,902 favoring strike action and 172 opposed, with nearly 57,000 abstaining from voting.

The big local thus became the third Ford unit to authorize the U.A.W. leadership to call a strike. Since the union ordered the strike polls a week ago, Ford workers at the firm's Mound Road plant here and one at St. Paul, Minn., haven taken similar action.

The union and the company are at odds over union demands for a $100-a-month pension and a wage increase.

Report Amethyst Released By Reds, Going To Hongkong

HONGKONG (AP)—A reliable source said today the British sloop Amethyst, hit by Chinese Communist artillery in the Yangtze, had been released by the Communists, but naval authorities doubt it.

The source said the sloop now was proceeding down the Yangtze on her way to Hongkong.

The Amethyst was struck by artillery fire in April and was beached between Shanghai and Nanking. Three other British warships which tried to rescue the sloop were damaged by Communist artillery fire.

Since then the Amethyst has been anchored in the Yangtze while British authorities negotiated for her release.

Naval authorities here have been hush-hush about the Amethyst. Their denial might be an effort to keep the matter quiet.

The source said the British cruiser, Jamaica, carrying Vice-Admiral Sir Patrick E. J. Brind, commander in the Far East, would anchor near the mouth of the Yangtze, presumably to meet the sloop. The Jamaica left Hongkong June 26. Her announced destination was Japan.
